Here Is Hoping You
A VERY MERRY CHRISTMAS And
HAPPY NEW YEAR

We have been very busy today delivering rush orders of coal. One of our good customers called up and said, "Pratt, I want to make the old lady that is keeping house for me a present of a ton of that high-powered coal." It seems that since someone's hot water system froze up and their stove blew up that nearly everybody calls this coal high-powered. At first people were somewhat afraid of it, but after I told them that just ordinary common coal would do the same thing, but perhaps not as quick as the Royal, they got over their scared feeling and are buying lots of coal again.

It makes me think of an old lady down South that had always cooked in a fireplace. Her grandson, who became a noted evangelist made his grandmother a present of a beautiful modern range stove. His grandmother met him at the train two years later to take him out for a good baked chicken pie feed and the evangelist said, "Grandma, how do you like your range?" She answered, "I don't know, I haven't tried it yet." That is why there are a few people that don't seem to know about Royal.
