BUTTER HIGHER; SUGAR IS LOWER

Winter Weather Conditions Result in Higher Produce Levels

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 19 (AP)—Further advances in butter are shown for the day. Extras, standards and prime firsts are up a half cent at 46, 45 1/2 and 44 cents, respectively. No change has been announced in print prices, although the market is displaying a good healthy tone. Winter weather conditions together with higher levels in outside markets is responsible for the advance here.

Fresh eggs declined again today. Extras, firsts and pullers are down a cent each on the exchange at 31 cents on the top grades and 29 cents on the latter two grades.

Butchers were on the street this morning looking for both pork and veal, but express deliveries were very light, choice light calves bringing 18 to 19 1/2 cents and fancy hogs 17 cents generally although the 17 is obtained in some instances.

No improvement is shown in the live poultry market. Receipts were light today but front street batteries are still well loaded and the demand is limited. Prices are unchanged.

Again Moves Up; Closing Strong

NEW YORK, Jan. 19 (AP)—With the technical position of the market strengthened by the recent selling of the industrial shares, stock prices moved forward easily today under the impetus of lower call money rates. Buying orders were again distributed over a broad list, with the industrials superseding the market leaders.

Merchandising issues developed special strength on the announcement that January sales were running 12 per cent above those of the corresponding period last year.

Flora 14,000; market slow; druggists; few early sales strong to shade higher; bulk desirable 140 to 200 pound averages, $12.15 to 12.25; early top, $12.30.

Cattle—9,000; fed steers, 15 to 25c higher; good to choice heavy showing marked advance; strictly choice 1,465 averages, $12.65; loads, $12.00 to 12.35; bulk stock and vendors steady; bulk of month ending (old) climbing three points. J. H. Macy and company jumped over five points, and Frank H. Shattuck and Abraham and Straus each sold at least three points over yesterday's final figures.

In the railroad group, St. Louis and San Francisco at 119 1/2 and B. and O. 113 sold at their high prices in years. Wabash preferred B moved up three points and New York Central, Atchafalaya, Chesapeake and Ohio and Bangor and Aroostook sold two or more points higher.

The closing was strong. Speculative enthusiasm on the buying side increased when the rise in General Motors, Baldwin and other favorites extended three points or more. Pierce-Arrow preferred was carried up over six points and Timken Roller Bearing moved up four. Lehigh Valley rose to 122, a new high. Total sales approximated 1,500,000 shares.

ARMY IS NO PLACE FOR MISFITS OR OFFENDERS—DAVIS SEES TO THAT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (AP)—Policies who still harbor the notion that the army in peacetime is a sort of home of correction for which wayward youths can be committed to the financial and mental relief of their home communities, are apt to fall foul of a hunting and sometimes explosive Washington official known to his intimates as "Corky" Davis. His official title is The Adjutant General of the Army. He appears in the army list as Tibor C. Davis, major general.

Among the amazingly diverse duties of his office is that of recruiting the army. Other complicated machinery works out how soldiers are to be fed, clothed, drilled, educated, discharged, transported, organized, hospitalized, entertained, paid, retired and even buried. But it all begins with finding the young chaps to whom these processes are to be applied.

Good Soldiers, Good Citizens

That's "Corky" Davis' job. Last year he collected and fed into the army machine nearly 60,000. Presently the vast majority of them will be good soldiers. Still later they will be much improved civilians again, with honorable discharges to show.

But so far as General Davis and his far-reaching recruiting service are able to guarantee it, they were able to guarantee it, they were able to guarantee it to begin with. If there was a physical misfit or a moral delinquent in the lot, he sneaked in somehow through elaborate barriers erected to keep the morally, mentally and physically unfit out of the ranks of Uncle Sam's modest-sized fighting machine.

Critique Lenient Judges

Within the last year, General Davis has personally investigated the operation of new, simplified recruitment tests designed to bar out men with lawless tendencies. He is stinging at reduction of the army desertion and imprisonment rates, for one thing, and is satisfied that results are beginning to show. It's quite natural, therefore, that he sees red whenever an instance comes to his notice of a justice fling off a minor offender against civil law or promising the culprit to enlist in the army. The general explodes with all the vigor of a haw, condescends and sharply worded correspondence issues.

The adjutant general has had years of first-hand experience with troops to settle his views on the kind of soldiers Uncle Sam wants. He has been through the infantry mill with them from "shovelhead second louts" to brigade command, even division for a time.

Origin of "Corky's" Name

The army at large regards that nickname, "Corky," as probably significant in a starchy way of the kind of an adjutant general of the A. E. F. he made, or of his work now in Washington. Not so. It was hit upon to him in West Point and has to do with his legs.

The "bamboozled," razor-edged, white uniform pants of the West Pointers are the special pride of the most swanky dressers of each succeeding class. Cadet Davis was, and still is, all of that. And he was, and still is, equipped with a pair of rather slender and very straight legs. They set off a pair of white ducks to admiration. An envious and more bulky built comrade once complained that he also could show cadet class as a white pants wearer, "if I had cork legs."

After that, of course, Cadet Davis became "Corkie" Davis. Perfectly simple that "Corky" should follow—and stick for life.
