Guild Planning a Tamale Supper

MENUS

By Sister Mary
BREAKFAST—Granfruit juice, crushed oats with chopped raisins, hash in tomato sauce on toast, crisp granham toast, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Cream of spinach soup, toasted cracker, cottage cheese and olive salad, nut rolls, brown sugar cookies, milk, tea.

DINNER—Salt codfish pie, buttered asparagus on toast, radishes, pineapple and rice pudding, rye rolls, milk, coffee.

The hash suggested in the breakfast menu uses the "tail" and close trimmings from the bone of the porterhouse steak served for dinner the immediately previous evening. There is always bound to be some meat left just close to the bone, so if these scraps aren't used in hash use the bone as a basis for a luncheon soup.

Nut Rolls
Three-fourths cup milk, 1 yeast cake dissolved in 1/4 cup lukewarm water, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons melted butter, 1 egg, 1/2 cup maple syrup, 1/4 cup chopped nuts, bread, flour, Sifted milk, Cool until lukewarm and add dissolved yeast cake and 1-1/2 cups flour. Beat until smooth, cover, put in a warm place and let rise about 1 1/2 hours. Add sugar, salt, egg well beaten, melted butter and flour enough to knead. Knead until dough feels spongy and elastic to the touch. Use as little flour as possible. Form into a large ball, place in a mixing bowl and let rise again. When double its bulk roll on a lightly floured molding board into a strip about 1/4 inch thick. Spread with softened butter, pour over syrup, sprinkle with nuts and roll up like a jelly roll. Cut across the roll in slices 1/2 inch thick. Place close together in a buttered pan, flat side down, cover and let rise for half an hour. Bake 25 minutes in a hot oven.

HEALTH

HOW YOU SPRAY DISEASE GERMS!
By E. C. Frisling, M. D., Galesburg, Ill.

Member Gorgas Memorial Inst., All contagious diseases such as colds, grippe, flu, measles, scarlet fever, diphtheria, meningitis, etc. are caused by bacteria (germs). A bacterium is a minute, one-cell vegetable organism approximately one twenty-five thousandth of an inch in diameter.

It is impossible to see a bacterium with the naked eye. The microscope which has highly magnifying lenses has to be used to study them. The smallest particle of dust or "droplet" of fluid contains thousands of these bacteria.

Whenever a person coughs, sneezes or talks, he forces out (of the nose and mouth) many "small droplets", some visible to the naked eye, others not. Secretion collected with bacteria from the mouth or nasal cavity. If another person is within ten to fifteen feet he breathes in these small "droplets" containing the germs and if he is susceptible to those germs will contract the disease. Particles of dust, if contaminated by ex-pectoration of infected persons, will accomplish the same thing.

If the sick person is out in the open, the breath or secretions from the cough or sneeze or talk are quickly diluted by the air to such an extent that they are slightly contagious except at very close range. But in the sick room or in school rooms, theaters, churches, or any building, especially where the circulation is poor, the air becomes heavily laden with these invisible "droplets" containing millions of the germs causing the disease.

Now it would seem common sense that a person who knows or even thinks he is afflicted or has any suspicion that he has been exposed to any contagious disease, would use the simple method of putting his handkerchief or any other material or even his hand over his mouth and nose when he sneezes or coughs or talks. By so doing he will become almost absolutely dangerless, whether outside or in crowded buildings.

Legal quarantine is the enforcement of respect of a person afflicted with a contagious disease for the other fellow, while prevention of disease or hygiene is the respect one has for another in regard to the exposing with his own afflictions. By remembering and getting the habit of using your handkerchief, a little thing, and yet so effective against the spread of contagious diseases, one becomes quite safe.

Anybody with even a suggestion of a cold or any contagious disease or knowingly having been exposed to any of them, should consider it a crime not to use his handkerchief or any other material to catch the "droplets" of saliva or secretion from his mouth or nose, when he coughs or sneezes while near any other person. This should be especially remembered in church, schoolroom, theater, street car, or other crowded place.

WOMEN NOT NOW BARRED FROM THEATER PARTERRE
Woman has broken down the barrier that kept her out of certain seats in the principal theaters of France, the government subsidized Comedie-Francaise. Edouard Herriot, minister of public instruction in France, has given her a seat in the "parterre" or back rows of the orchestra floor, the seats where the French theater goer figures he gets the most for his money.

Tradition, dating from the days when the parterre was considered the roughest part of the theater, barred women from seats there. Formerly spectators brought their lunch and wine to the parterre and expressed their opinions freely, regardless of their neighbors.

Pink Teas a Bore So Society Girl Turns to Answering All Questions

ATLANTA, Feb. 8 (AP)—"Where can I get a list of Canadian hay fever resorts?" "Would fish georgette do for a wedding?" "What should one wear to Bobby Jones' dimmer dance?" "I love her, but she does not care for me. What should I do?"

These are indicative of the hundreds of questions Mrs. Eugene Harrington, Atlanta society matron, now is answering instead of going to pink teas. Social life became monotonous, so she established a personal service department in a large store—and put it across.

First, the department was designed to assist shoppers in the purchase of goods, but now it has developed into—well, let her describe it.

"We planted a book exchange, and grew a library. Instead of adding a few shoppers in the store, we buy for both men and women all over the country, plan trips abroad, sell theater tickets, department tickets, plan teas and dances, give advice to the lovelorn and find lost children."

Mrs. Harrington varied her life as a debutante by driving an army truck during the World war. She has trained numerous girls and assisted them in establishing businesses of their own.

But she admits she and her assistants occasionally have to spar for time as persons over the telephone and behind the office railing such questions as these:

"What is really the proper manner in which to act in a hotel?" "Where can I rent a punch bowl?" "How can I work my way to Europe?"

"How do I recover a nickel from this phone?"

At that, she says, it is far more interesting than pink teas.

The Garden

ANNUALS YOU OUGHT TO GROW
For the flower gardener who has too many household cares to devote much time to the garden, the choice of annuals for the season's bloom is an important question. What are the ideal annuals for such a gardener? What should be their characteristics? First of all, ease of culture is demanded—plants the seed of which can be sown in the open ground and thinned instead of being laboriously transplanted. Second is a display of color in the garden. Third is freedom of bloom. Fourth is a goodly supply for cutting—those with long enough stems for the purpose without cutting off whole branches of the plant. Fifth, annuals to cover the entire season and appear at various times in order not to become monotonous. Stuffed from all these points, the following list seems to comply as close to requirements as any that might be compiled and it is open to argument according to individual tastes, likes and dislikes—snapdragons, marigolds, poppies, larkspurs, nasturtiums, scabiosa, zinnias. The one factor of fragrance is supplied only by the nasturtium in this list and perhaps magnolia should be added to compensate.

With these eight annuals a garden brilliant from mid-June until killing frosts could be maintained with a minimum of care, the chief requirement being to keep down the weeds. They could be arranged in beds or planted in rows like vegetables or plant in an annual border with as great certainty of satisfactory results as could be attained with any flowering plants.

To this list might be added a few dwarf growing plants, for edging, such as ageratum, sweet alyssum, lobelia and the miniature marigold, Tagetes signata, which is not well known.

These eight annuals will supply an abundance of the finest material for cutting, the poppy being most valuable but making up for their weakness in brilliance as well as delicacy of coloring and lavish profusion of bloom.
