WHAT A $3 AD DID
An Oklahoma girl advertised for a husband, and landed one within a very short time. The advertise- ment cost $3. She paid the wedding expenses, $8. In less than a year the husband died, says the Oklaho- man Globe, and left his widow an $11,000 insurance policy.

Now will you admit that it pays to advertise?

Vacation: Something that makes folks dislike work all the more.

"Just think, Aunt Lu, my hus- band got Hamburg and Java on the radio last night."

"Now, my dear child, you don't think I'll ever believe that can de- liver groceries on that contrap- tion."

A little petting
Now and then,
Will play hook with
The wisest men.

Kissing is what young people do too much of and married people too little of.

"I suppose, down this way, when young people attend social events at night they have no regular chaperon along?" asked a lady tourist in the Pea Ridge region.

"Well—put—no, mom," replied Ragsan Tatters a prominent resi- dent of the boys carry hats and generally find 'em perfection enough."

Old Gentleman (Who has col- lided violently with a young man)—I beg your pardon, sir.

Young man—Entirely my fault, sir.

Old Gentleman—Then why in the blazes don't you look where you're going?

The best a knocker can expect from the door of opportunity is skinned knuckles.

Hap: "When she wasn't looking I kissed her."

Bill: "Oh, boy! Then what did she do?"

Hap: "Refused to look at me for the rest of the evening."

Never kid the Judge. The day of the court jester is past.

AT THE THEATERS

"The Impostor" Showing Today Only at Sherrys

Real, honest-to-gosh crook drama that is realistic without be- ing overdone and thrilling without being ridiculous, is a scarce thing, but in "The Impostor," now show- ing at the Sherry theater, the cin- ema fan who appreciates magent- front acting woven with a con- vincing and well-timed story can get a thousand per cent on his in- vestment. Evelyn Brent, the petite F. B. O. star, is at her best in this thrilling film as the rich girl who impersonates a crook to save her brother from the penitentiary, and the material, adapted by Ewart Adamson from the original by "Chir- ford Howard," is directed with tell- ing effect by Chet Withey. Life- like shots in a New York gambling den, vivid character portrayals, a fight between the reporter and the jewel thief that will leave the spec- tator's fingerprints on the arms of their chairs, the whole interwoven with a tense atmosphere of intrigue and adventure, are the outstanding features of this production. Those who like red-blooded action will do well to see this picture before it leaves.

Comedy showing Big Boy "That Cute Kid," in his latest funny face.

Menjou's Role Unique in "Evening Clothes"

In his newest Paramount star- ring vehicle, "Evening Clothes," showing at the Arcade theater to- day and Saturday, Adolphe Menjou adopts a beard and plays the coun- try gentleman, in the French man- ner.

The story adapted from the French play "The Man in Evening Clothes" by Andre Boreud and Yves Mirande, two of France's popular playwrights, is concerned with the adventures of Lucien, a wealthy member of the landed French nobility and his adven- tures following his acquisition of a wife who is a Parisian. Their in- compatibility, which is the result of her marrying him not because of love but in respect for the wishes of her parents, forms the motive of the action. Germaine, the bride (Virginia Valli) scorns Lucien be- cause of his uncouth country ways. She cannot understand his prefer- ence for a life on a farm to life in the gay drawing rooms of the capital. He permits her to leave him on their wedding day, after forcing on her half his fortune.

The scene of the picture moves to Paris, where Menjou is spend- ing his time, money and energy acquiring the city polish that he considers would make him pleas- ing in the eyes of his lost bride. How he first fails because of her own unbelief in him; and how he is reduced to poverty through his subsequent attitude of recklessness, is unfolded in a series of dramatic and humorous episodes that add more laurels to the already heavy wreath that Menjou wears. The complications of the plot are finally untwisted to make a strong dramatic climax in which Menjou with Germaine as the object of his emotion exhibits all the finer sub- tleties of the acting that has made him famous.

Noah Beery plays the part of Lazarre, a comic, whose girl Fox Trot (Louise Brooks) leaves him for Lucien. Luther Reed directed.

"Blind Alleys" Is Tom Meighan's Ace Is Claim

"Blind Alleys," deserves a place right at the head of Thomas Meighan's many starring vehicles. In it, Tommy takes a crack at fast melodrama; the result, as might be expected, is darned entertaining.

Owen Davis and Frank Tuttle had a lot to do with the success of "Blind Alleys." The former wrote the story and Mr. Tuttle directed. Evelyn Brent and Greta Nissen in the featured feminine leads, give Mr. Meighan capable support and the audience money heart throbs.

To relate the plot would detract from one's interest on seeing the picture but the relating of a few of the highlights will show exactly what's to be expected in "Blind Al- leys." It opens with an impressive morning ceremony in which Tom, a merchant marine captain, mar- ries his Cuban fiancée, Miss Nissen. They journey to New York on their honeymoon and—things start hap- pening. First, the young husband is knocked unconscious by an auto in Times Square; then Greta falls into the hands of some thugs; Tommy leaves the hospital, goes into a coma and a strange woman nurses him back to health.

And—to catch my breath—that isn't the half of it! "Blind Alleys" will remain at the Star theater for two days more, today and Satur- day. Paramount produced it. Em- met Crozier prepared the screen play.

The new Gung comedy, "Being Home the Turkey" adds much fun to the program.

Some powder goes off with a bang; some goes on with a puff. You need a lot of shady people on the sunny side of easy street.
