FAMOUS FAIRY STORIES
"I'll pay you next week."
"You'll double your money in a year."

"I'll make 80 miles an hour."
"The tires are as good as new."
"Why, dear! I never look at another woman."

"You don't look a day over twenty."
"Not guilty."
"These eggs are strictly fresh."
"Every thread is pure wool."
"Fair and warmer tomorrow."

Gentle teacher (who has been endeavoring to inculcate the principal of "turning the other cheek") to the hardest egg in the class—Now, Willie, supposing a wilful individual struck you—what would you do?

Willie—Say, how big a guy is this Wilford Widdie, anyhow?

He loved to slide down shiny boards.

And often took a chance.

The times he had were ripping. He can prove it by his pants.

The thing that gets on our harmony nerves is to see a man wearing a light colored coat with dark pants.

"You say you've worn this hat three years," said the latter.

"Wonderful! It looks like new."
"Yes, three years, I've worn it," said the customer. "Once I had it reblocked, twice I got it cleaned, and once I changed it in a restaurant for a new one."

A Brooklyn, N. Y., man got five years for having six wives. That's discrimination. He didn't get soaked any for the first one.

Freda (archly): "Do you love me?"
Fred (with fervor): "Madly."
Freda: "Would you die for me?"
Fred: "Er—no. Mine's an undying love."

"I'll never forget the night you proposed," said the wife. "You acted like a fish out of water."
"Yes, I was a snicker."
"Then the gong sounded for the first round."

"I feel awfully sad, old man, I tell you it's hard to lose a wife."
"Hard? It's doggone near impossible."

AT THE THEATERS

Screen Comic At Star Is Given Praise

While Harold Lloyd was filming his second Paramount release "The Kid Brother," which is to tickle the ribs of local picture enthusiasts today and Saturday at the Star theater, two ministers paid a visit to the comedian's studio.

"Before I leave, Mr. Lloyd," said one of them, after he'd watched the star for nearly half an hour, "I want to pay you just one tribute. That is, whenever a Harold Lloyd picture comes to town mother and our two kiddies are always first in line to put our money through the box office window. There is never a doubt in my mind that your pictures will contain only the cleanest, most wholesome entertainment, and while I have seen a score of your works, I never have misplaced my confidence. It's a great work, son, and I only hope you keep it up."

This statement echoes the sentiment in which Lloyd is held by the entire country. Lloyd's early training was proof enough to him that one does not have to violate the rules of decency to be funny. His works have been a shining example of the belief. Never has the celebrated comedian overstepped or even approached the limit of propriety. That's one reason why he draws more persons into his box office of the world than any other player in motion pictures.

"The Kid Brother" is another of the high class brand for which Lloyd is famed. It has lack of the big idea that will always be found in a Lloyd comedy—unobtrusively, to be sure but none the less convincing. In his latest work he demonstrates the power of confidence over an inferiority complex that has been hammered into him by a family who look down on him as "the young 'un" hardly worthy of their consideration.

However, he makes love to all of the other ladies vigorously. And Mary Astor is undoubtedly beautiful enough as the heroine, the chaste Adriana, to justify her as the great love's final selection, to be borne off in a whirlwind climax to Don Juan's castle in Spain.

"Don Juan" is the feature attraction at the Arcade theater and will be presented tonight and again on Saturday.

A hard fought and bitterly contested election battle for a seat in the English Parliament, between Sir Melmoth Craven, a villain of the first rank, and John Orme, Margaret Garth's sweetheart, results in Orme's being thrown into prison for violating the election ordinances.

"Without Mercy," the George Melford production presented under the Metropolitan banner, last times tonight the Sherry theater depicts the campaign, and the workings of the opposing factions with a realism that immediately begets the onlooker's enthusiasm.

Long preliminary campaigns, political meetings, scenes at the polls and the tense excitement that reigns in opposing camps the last minute returns come in, when one vote may be the deciding factor; all these carry the spectator along on the edge of his seat, and leave him with a human desire to aid in freeing young Orme of the charges against him.

The novel manner in which he obtains his freedom and clears his name, gives "Without Mercy" one of many claims to its rank among the season's best productions.

In the cast are Dorothy Phillips, Rockcliffe Fellows, Vera Reynolds, Robert Ames, and Lionel

Barrymore Sets New Mark For Screen Romance

Since Barrymore played the sullen, sinuous sensual lover in "The Jest" on the stage, his admirers wondered when he would get around to evincing a similar character on the screen. In "The Jest," he seemed the living incarnation of Renaissance incarceration; passionate, daring colorful, breathlessly handsome.

But "The Jest," because of its morbid subject matter, was hardly stuff for the screen. The Warner Brothers, however, found something, not only just as good as a Barrymore vehicle, but a picture that sets a new mark for screen romance.

"Don Juan" is a stupendous melodrama of passionate beauty. From its first scenes in the Gothic Moorish castle in Spain, through the colorful pageantry of Rome in the days of the Borgias, it breathes the dark mystery, the tense suspense, the incomparable fascination of the days of the gorgeous Borgias.

Through it all, Barrymore literally blows a trail of passion. Never was he handsomer; never more supremely the master of creating romantic illusion. He loves gaily, torrentially, fiercely; he fights with reckless abandon; he thrills in every movement. His Don Juan is a masterpiece of romance.

Amid a cast that is studded with brilliant names, the name of Estelle Taylor probably stands out most luminously. This dark beauty, in a white wig, makes of Lucretia Borgia a character of memorable charm; an imperious beauty who, for some reason, is the only one that Don Juan refuses to make love to.

However, he makes love to all of the other ladies vigorously. And Mary Astor is undoubtedly beautiful enough as the heroine, the chaste Adriana, to justify her as the great love's final selection, to be borne off in a whirlwind climax to Don Juan's castle in Spain.
