WOULD SCHOOL MEN IN BABY TENDING

RALEIGH, N. C. — College courses for men in baby tending and dish washing "will cut down the nation's divorce toll." Mrs. Jane S. McKinnon, head of North Carolina's home demonstration corps, is the woman who suggests this addition to educational curriculum.

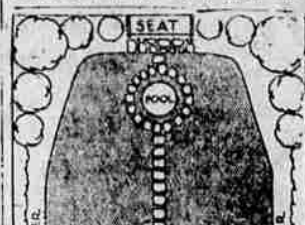

"Lack of training for family life is responsible for a great many divorces granted each year," she explains. "I would not have the men do all the house work, but I would teach them how, simply to give them an insight into problems which women have to face each day."

THE 1927 GARDEN STYLES—V

The back yard is the mainstay of the small place from a decorative standpoint with occasionally a side yard available. The garden should be planted if the house at all permits it with a window giving a view of the flower beds and borders.

There are two popular methods of treating a back yard. The time-honored method, based on sound principles is to keep the center open for a lawn space, planting at the sides with shrubbery and borders of annuals and perennials. A second arrangement which is very attractive and popular is to place a pool or bird bath in the center of the back yard, the pool reflecting the foliage and flowers about it and making an attractive feature. The low bird bath furnishes something of the same effect with its glittering patch of water.

PLAN FOR SMALL FORMAL BACK-YARD WITH BIRD BATH AS THE CENTRAL FEATURE

Formal gardens, that is, formal beds with varied plantings surrounding the pool or bird bath, make a gay display. It is the ideal method for those who are deeply interested in plants, as it gives them room for a much greater variety of planting. The effect will be good but not as restful as a simpler planting about an open lawn. This is the ideal arrangement for one not familiar with gardening or the thousands of plants available.

When the entire back yard is to be occupied by a garden, the living room or dining-room window should look down a path with a garden seat, a specimen plant, tree or shrub at the end of the path, or possibly a bird bath, sundial, gazing globe or statue.

In a back yard given over to a formal garden a circular design gives the greatest appearance of width and spaciousness but it is necessary to preserve the outlines of the beds to put in permanent edgings of stone, brick or some evergreen perennial.

In such an arrangement a small 50-foot lot with a garden space of 50-foot depth will accommodate a wealth of plants. It is possible by raising the back and the portion nearest the house a foot or so by a dry wall to give the appearance of a sunken garden.
