The Garden

HOTBED CROPS APPEARING

Hotbeds are now in full blast all over the country and their number is increasing each year. By the first week in April, seeds can be sown into the cold frames, the heatless hotbeds. The plan of a hotbed adjacent to the house to be heated by steam or hot-water pipes from the home-heating plant is receiving much attention and proving a practical solution for the dearth of manure for hotbed purposes.

It has been estimated that glass devoted to the raising of flowers and vegetables costs an average of a little over 50 cents a year per square foot, so a hotbed 6 by 6 feet is saving at least $18 a year in the price of vegetables and blooming plants. It can be made to do double duty and earn a dollar a square foot by being planted again in the fall.

Then, too, it is wise to plant two spring crops in the frame. When the extra early lettuce, cabbage, tomatoes, eggplants, peppers, pansies, asters and other plants are taken out to go into the open ground, late cabbage, celery, Brussels sprouts, cucumbers, melons and squashes can be given a start safe from any vagrant chill winds that do the vines no good.

Lettuce and tomatoes, while the cheapest of garden plants, are the ones that yield the most profit under glass, according to commercial figures. The plant-producing capacity of a 6 by 12 frame is remarkable as it is figured it will produce 1000 cabbage or cauliflower plants. Tomatoes properly transplanted and thinned will run 55 plants to a single sash or 110 to the 6 by 12 hotbed.

With the ease with which a frame can be constructed there is no excuse for any garden being without one. Experiments are being conducted with the new synthetic manure compounds for hotbed purposes but no practical results have been announced so far. If this chemical compound which produces synthetic manure for garden use very efficiently can be developed so that it will produce sufficient heat for hotbeds, the hotbed problem will be greatly simplified. It is one of the hopes of the future. Whether or not it will be realized, however, is uncertain so far.

Familiarity breeds TRUST

Contrary to the old adage, familiarity with some things breeds trust. Advertised products, for instance. The trade-names and firm-names you see regularly in this paper, by reason of their continuity, kindle familiarity first and then confidence. These are the names that leap to your lips in market-places.

Familiarity of this sort is a thing to be cultivated. The more you know about an advertiser and his wares, the more you are able intelligently to invest the family outlay for the necessities of life. This truth is self-evident.

Read the advertisements in this paper. Read them as carefully as you would read something you had to sign your name to. They will save your shopping time and your shopping dollars. Go into the stores with your mind more than half made up as to what you want and what you will have to pay.
