BATTLE AGAINST BOVINE T. B. GAINS

Increase in Number of Accredited Herds in U. S. Noted

The battle being waged by the government with the states to eradicate tuberculosis among cattle is having such marked success according to Dr. J. A. Kiernan, of the federal bureau of animal industry, that it is hoped to have the disease among bovine animals practically controlled by 1936.

"The disease," says Dr. Kiernan, "is under good control now because livestock owners are familiar with the work of the tuberculin test, and when they buy cattle they make sure that they go to a territory where the disease has been cleaned up, and in that way they protect their interests."

More than 1,000 veterinarians, including 225 employed by the government, are now carrying on the war in 300 counties, 200 of which have been virtually freed of the malady and declared "modified accredited counties," or those where the infection has been controlled to less than one-half of one percent.

Compared with an original appropriation of $75,000 in 1917 for the work, the government will have available next fiscal year approximately $6,000,000. The states are spending about $14,000,000 annually themselves.

Since 1917 more than 1,250,000 tubercular cattle have been killed. Replacement of these with higher capacity and healthier producers has increased the production and consumption of milk. In addition to getting the salvaged carcasses used for food, the grower is indemnified by the government on an average of $18 for each infected animal slaughtered, in addition to about $30 a head by the states.

A recent survey shows that tuberculosis among cattle has declined from more than four percent in 1922 to 2.8 percent in 1926. More than 9,000,000 head were tested last year.

This is a new blade weeder mounted on three wheels; does the work of two 16-in. blades of old type and easier to handle.

Galloway Bros., of Elgin, Ore., write: Our 20-in. Shiner weeder with which we are able to cultivate from 35 to 40 acres in one day has given us entire satisfaction on our farm of 600 acres. We find it better than any weeder we have used before, and it saves us much valuable time and money in our cultivating bill."

(Signed) Galloway Bros., Elgin, Ore.

The Shiner weeder is sure death on morning glories. It is built so as to go shallow or deep. Come in next week and see a weeder for yourself.

They are going like wildfire in Unatilla and Walla Walla counties and the company wanted to spread them all over Union county—that is why they gave the agency to Claude C. Pratt.

TERRORS OF TELEVISION

With television in effect the only other problem we've got to face is to make a night club look like the bedside of a sick friend. . . . The careful when calling up to say that you've been called away suddenly for a couple of days. The poker chips might give you away. . . . By television the human face can be cast hundreds of miles, say the experts. For some, that isn't far enough. . . . So the Irishman was right after all when he said: "Somebody to see you in the phone!"

Benito Mussolini declared vehemently that no man ever became world-famous while wearing long whiskers. It's true, then; there ain't no Santa Claus.
