PARIS OUT WITH SUMMER STYLES

Professional Buyers Already Combing Collections of Dressmakers

By Hazel Reavis (Associated Press Fashion Editor)

PARIS, June 6.—Professional buyers have just combed the collections of Paris dressmakers for the several versions of summer styles.

What are they taking back to women who cannot come to Paris? Ensembles of silk, afternoon and evening dresses of chiffon, sports clothes of lightweight kasha and washable silk and evening wraps of fur or chiffon are the chief purchases.

The silk ensembles have long or short coats and come in two or three pieces. Tailored ensembles are made of crepe de chine and even georgette. Usually they have short coats—almost bolero jackets. Silk blouses and suits are fashionable fabrics for the summer ensemble. Favorite colors continue to be dark blue, beige, gray and the pastel shades, pink, blue and pale green predominating. Pink and green frequently are combined, as are blue and pink.

Gowns for afternoon and evening are mostly full and rippling chiffons. Many of those for afternoon are printed in small flower designs. Often the effect is blurred and multi-colored. With the chiffon dresses are worn chiffon wraps with colors and cuffs of long fur, or shaved rabbit. Shaved rabbit also is used on fur coats and sometimes is stitched with an effect of ermine worked in stripes.

Tailored suits show longer coats. Some of the newest models are at least three-quarter length. Brown is one of the newest colors and sometimes the shade is nearer purple than brown. There is a general tendency to fit suits to a normal waistline. One important house places fullness in front, flaring from a belted waistline. Much crepe braids is used on tailored dresses and suits with short jackets.

A new sweater is heralded from an important sports house. It is called Jeanne d'Arc and was inspired by the Maid of Orleans' coat of mail.

Heavy hats have almost conquered felt for mid-summer wear. Most of the summer models are of felt, light-weight, plume-straw, draped but seldom trimmed.
