MAN THOUGHT TO BE SLAYER IS CAPTURED

Picked Lock—Placed in a double locked cell, he picked the locks with ease and disappeared in the bush.

The suspect was one of two men arrested on suspicion of being the slayer. Dressed in overalls and apparently tired, the man called at a farm house last evening and asked for food. The farmer suspecting he was the hunted stranger from a description broadcast by radio, notified provincial police at Kiltarney who took him into custody. They said his description tallied closely with the slayer.

The other suspect was taken from a freight train at North Portland, Sask., and held at the Royal Canadian police barracks pending arrival of provincial officers. He gave his name as Harry Endworth and his age as 33. North Portland is a customs port on the U. S. border.

ROME, June 16. (AP)—Commander Francesco De Pinedo, Italian aviator, arrived at Ostia on the coast near Rome at 5 o'clock this afternoon accomplishing his sensational four continent flight. He was greeted by immense cheering crowds and official welcome by Premier Mussolini and other dignitaries.

PORTLAND, Ore., June 16. (AP)—Ira Dorn, Salt Lake heavyweight, won one fall and the decision over Jack Cannon, San Francisco, here last night. Dorn took the fall after one hour, 45 minutes.

1200 PEOPLE HEAR HEBER GRANT TALK (Continued from Page 1) promulgated by Joseph Smith, and I shall devote a majority of my time to that theme," began President Grant. Reading the 12 articles one by one, the speaker expounded the meaning of each. In addition to a detailed explanation and interpretation of the articles, the address was a cross-section of the life of the speaker in which his personal experiences stretching beyond the allotted span of three years and ten years were actually used as testimonials to the more important points in the articles of faith.

Several clauses in the reading prompted clear cut interpretation by the speaker. He emphasized that the church believes in healing by the laying on of hands; that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God; that the church is perhaps the most literal interpreter of the Bible among all Christian churches; that God is an individual; that John the Baptist baptized Jesus; that God, the Father and His Son Jesus Christ revealed themselves to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery; that men are saved through the atonement of Jesus Christ; that by abstaining from liquor and tobacco the Latter Day Saint escapes many ills and often foretells the Angel of Death; that blessings can be bestowed to others by the priesthood of the church; that speaking in tongues is a frequent prophetic manifestation.

Tells of Experiences—To many of these doctrines the speaker called upon a rich field of his own experiences and of other prominent men who at numerous times and in varying conditions had personal experiences to prove the divinity of the book of Mormon, Blessings and prophecy bestowed upon Mr. Grant when a babe; his recovery from critical illness through church healing; his rise to the highest office in the church; were all told without any set so forcibly that each episode was used as slanting proof to the argument in hand.

"Not all men subscribe to the articles of faith of our church," declared the speaker, "and some deny the truth of them. But we believe them and proclaim them true. After all," concluded the speaker, "it is not what a man claims to be that counts, but what he really is."

President Grant, Mrs. Grant, their sons-in-law and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Judd and their niece, Miss Helen Winters and Miss June Woodruff left this morning by car for Portland. They were guests last evening at the home of Louisa and Elmer Stoddard. President Grant and Messrs. Judd and Smith enjoyed a round of golf yesterday afternoon as well as a drive in and about the city.

Obituary JAMES MCCLURE (Continued) James McClure, of the Ladd Canyon district, who recently passed away was a native son of the Pacific Northwest, being born in Lane county, Oregon, Jan. 2, 1858. With his parents, Charles and Laura McClure, he came to Umatilla, on the Columbia river, and after a short time there he came to this valley, settling here in 1884.

He was a member of a memorable council held in the year '72, which a few white men and a great band of Nez Perce Indians, who sought to force the intruders from the region, this gathering being held in an Indian lodge near Walla Walla. There were present several hundred Indians who were greatly put out by the persistence of the whites with their cattle and cabins. Joseph Johnson appeared as spokesman for the settlers, but Chief Joseph insisted that James McClure stand up for the whites and to him they made their demands that the whites get out and take their cabins with them.

Mr. McClure was also one of the early freighters between Umatilla and La Grande and many times camped where the city of Pendleton now stands. He was in the government employ and through the Indian war of 1875-79 he rode the trails for Mayfield and Lowell between the Grande Ronde valley and Wyoming. He was freighted between Idaho, Ida., and Kelton.

Mr. McClure was of able character and lovable disposition and his passing marks the closing of a life with many hardships in helping with the building of the west. The community suffers a distinct loss in his passing.

He leaves besides his widow, Mrs. Helen Earls McClure, three children, Harley, Neil and Mrs. Ed Johnson; a sister, Mrs. Hattie Ferguson, all of Pendleton; and three brothers, William, of Clatsop, Ida., Frank and Charles, of La Grande, also five grand children besides many other relatives and a host of friends.
