ANOTHER LINK FOUND
JERUSALEM—Another missing link has been found. The step between the language of pictures (ideographs) and the alphabet is believed to be shown in fragments of inscriptions found in the Sinai peninsula by a Harvard expedition. Deciphering the words "na'at" clinched the theory, say the experts.

A Romanian presented King Albert with a box of cigars. Nominations are now in order.

AT THE THEATERS

Louise Fazenda Is Star In "Finger Prints"

You can lead a horse to water, but you have to push it in to drink. Louise Fazenda is now, in reality, what she has been in the hearts of moving picture audiences for many a long day—a star. Her role in "Finger Prints" is one after another of her own. She plays the part of small, sharp-nosed, sporting Lucia Traynor, secretary in a house of mystery, which hides a gang of desperate robbers. What does she do? Well, she shivers, half-raising terrors she encounters! What varying degrees of fright she simulates, from ear-piercing attention to wide-eyed shrieking frenzy! The role has given Louise her largest opportunity and she has seized it with the rest of a true comedienne.

Playing opposite her is John I. Murray, the musical comedy re-creator to pictures who scored a big hit in "Barclays the Magnificent."

John Castle is also featured in the role of a hard-boiled man, who carries around with him in a pocket a paper that tells the hiding place of $5,000,000 in loot.

The picture was directed by Lloyd Bacon, who put on "Broken Hearts of Hollywood" and "Private Lady Murphy." It is an adaptation of a story by Arthur Somers Roche.

Comedy showings "Little Annie Loomay."

Twinkle, twinkle, little dress: You are climbing, I'll confess. But you should do nothing rash if you'll turn into a saah!

Jinx—That girl is a mathematical impossibility.
Blinks—Howmat?
Jinx—She's a half Spanish, half French and half envy.

A mosquito can fly a mile. The chigger can't fly at all but he somehow manages to arrive.

Judge—"Well, Eph, your wife's needed to your wishes and got a divorce. Are you satisfied now?"
"Satisfied? Don't I sit any all-mony?"

AND IT LOOMS LARGE
The thing most in the Public Eye.

Remarkable old Mr. Blander, especially when traveling by airplane, has no doubt's a cinch.

A Scotch farmer had agreed to deliver 20 hens to the local market. Only 19, however, were sent, and it was almost evening before the 20th bird was brought in by the farmer.

"Man," said the butcher, "you're late with this one!"
"Yes," agreed the other, "but you see, she didn't lay until this afternoon."

A gown used to be a garment to sleep in, but now it's worn at social functions.

PAIR SKIRTS PREDICTED
PARIS—For skirts are to be a full next winter, says Paul Poiret. The proponent of real trousers as a feminine mode, undeterred by his lack of success in that direction, brings forward skirts and jackets of popular—and expensive—silks. Under the jackets would be worn sort fabric bloomers.

Two old cronies, life-long friends, have a falling out when one heeds the call of progress and opens a service station next door to the ancient ivory table of his friend.

Ralph Lewis and Lionel Belmore as the two friendly cronies and a great deal of humanity to this novel story of the race track, and give occasional touches of pathos or well as comedy to the picture.

A Buster Brown comedy "Buster Brown" is also showing.

"Cyclone Cowboy" Feature At Star Theater

The "Cyclone Cowboy," which is Wally Wales' latest starring vehicle, will be the feature attraction at the Star theater Tuesday only and, according to the promises made by the management, local fans have a great treat in store for them, for this production is heralded as the very best that this popular Western star has ever made. Drama, comedy, heart throbs and thrills abound, and the story builds to a climax of great intensity, the apex of which is reached when Wally lassoes the heroine from her horse's back and so pulls her from the very midst of the outlaw band into whose clutches she had fallen, and up onto the steep cliff above.

There are said to be many unique and unexpected twists to the story, and it is claimed that it is exceptionally true to life in that the good people are not entirely faultless and the "bad" folk not entirely reprehensible. For in "The Cyclone Cowboy" more than the lovely heroine herself makes some grievous mistakes, and a lady, whose name is not given, proves that he has some redeeming qualities after all.

In the leading role opposite Wally is Violet Hibel, a newcomer to the Western drama, she having had her early schooling in the Mack Bennett comedies as have so many of our most successful dramatic stars. Raye Hampton, who weighs two hundred pounds and is only a little less than six feet in height, is cast as a female ranch boss, and she contributes much to the comedy of the production.

Richard Lee is cast as the lounge lizard, and George Magrell as the bad man, Ann Warrington, in the role of an Eastern society woman, completes the cast.

"That's No Revere," is the comedy.

"IRISH NAVY" SOLD
NEW YORK—The "Irish navy" has been sold for $100. The submarine constructed by John P. Holland 40 years ago for Fenian supporters who hoped to use it against the British fleet, was junked down for that sum to a local man.

American soldiers are brave in battle, say the Australians. Some Yankee doughboy is just the one who could drive a pleasure launch across the Detroit river and get there alive.

Mary Astor In "The Sunset Derby" Is At Arcade

The somewhat one-sided battle between the automobile and the horse is depicted in a whimsical humorous manner in "The Sunset Derby," the first National picture featuring William Collier Jr., and Mary Astor showing at the Arcade theater tonight only.

Two old cronies, life-long friends, have a falling out when one heeds the call of progress and opens a service station next door to the ancient ivory table of his friend.

Ralph Lewis and Lionel Belmore as the two friendly cronies and a great deal of humanity to this novel story of the race track, and give occasional touches of pathos or well as comedy to the picture.

A Buster Brown comedy "Buster Brown" is also showing.
