General Course Of Stock Prices Is Reactionary

NEW YORK, June 27. (AP)—Persistent selling of the oils and coppers turned the general course of stock prices reactionary today after operators for the rise had made an ineffectual attempt to attract outside following by buying some of the railroad equipment shares. Selling orders poured into the market in fairly large volume, with numerous declines of 1 to 6 points scattered throughout the list.

Marland, Pan-American, Cimmus, Skelly and General Asphalt all touched new low ground.

Baldwin dropped from 231 to 226 and Commercial Solvents B also sold down 5 points. General Railway Signal crossed 123 to a new peak, but met with large offerings around that figure. Chandler-Cleveland preferred collapsed from 19 to 12 and then snapped back to 18.

Missouri Pacific common and preferred each broke more than two points on the publication of an unfavorable May earnings report.

The closing was weak. Active selling for both accounts carried down a number of prominent shares, 3 to 4 points below Saturday's closing prices. Houston Oil collapsed 9 points, Baldwin and Dupont 6½, General Motors 5½, Delaware and Hudson and American Smelting 4½. Total sales approximated 2,100,000 shares.

MECHANICS START WORK ON FOKKER AIRPLANE TODAY

after having made an apparently successful test flight yesterday. The time of the contemplated hop off was not made known.

Ready for Test

Ernest Smith got his plane ready for test flights last night after working feverishly with a large force of mechanics. By setting a strenuous pace he expected to complete all preliminaries and be ready for the take off before sundown.

In spite of the fact that Maitland and Hegenberger announced they did not contemplate a take off before tomorrow the impression that they would make an earlier start than that caused Smith's forces to work at frantic speed.

Although the chances of Grace and his navigator, Lieut. Eston B. Roger, for a take off from the Hawaii end today, were unknown here, Smith was conceded to have the best chance to be the first to get into the air, because the army flyers, must await General Patrick's approval of the plane before they can go.

The Oakland municipal airport, where a special 7,000 foot runway has been constructed was ready to accommodate both the army plane and Smith for their take offs. Maitland and Hegenberger inspected the runway yesterday and pronounced it in splendid condition.

The weather bureau promised headwinds for take off weather here and in the islands today, declaring there would be a fresh east breeze from Hawaii to the half way mark, and a stiff northwest breeze from there to the mainland, with fairly clear weather at this end.

WILL LOOK TO SUN

SAN FRANCISCO, June 27 (AP)—The sun, radio and man's ingenuity, will guide the Pacific flyers in their crafts of cloth and wood from California toward Honolulu.

Though the radio of modern science is to be a strong guiding factor for both Lieutenant Lester J. Maitland of the army, and Ernest L. Smith, civilian flyer, each will look to the sun for accurate checks on their course.

In the navigators cabin aboard the giant army Fokker, were installed practically all the instruments recognized by aeronautic experts as essential to keeping the aircraft on its true course. In addition were instruments unknown to flyers and carefully guarded as secrets withheld from common knowledge until after they proved themselves on the hop across the 2100 miles of Pacific waters.

Sextants, compasses and a radio set were installed in the navigators cabin of the Smith plane. Perhaps the most interesting instrument in this little monoplane was the radio set, constructed especially for the flight, capable of operating on a 600 meter wave length, similar to that used by the Pacific ocean liners and weighing but 35 pounds.

Untried Before

In the Fokker was a radio instrument heretofore untried. A delicate receiving set to keep the ship oriented along a pathway between two radio beams, one transmitting from a station and the other from Honolulu. These "beams" are to be constuted of letter signals, one the continental code "A" and the other the letter "N" dot and dash and dash and dot, respectively.

These signals parallel each other across the sea with several hundreds yards between them.

The army plane is to follow the lane between the signals. Navigator Lieutenant Albert Hegenberger, tuning in with his instrument hears the combination of these signals, or the letter "A" on continuous dash in the continental code. As long as he hears this signal he knows that lieutenant Maitland is on the right path. Any deviation from the path brings one or the other of the signals into his instrument and he knows by these in which direction the plane must be steered to hit the right course.

Transmit Hourly

Navigator Charles H. Carter, aboard the Smith plane, is to transmit for five minutes hourly a signal with his radio set. Ships hearing these signals will know that the plane is safely in the air. Should the plane be forced down into the water the set is expected to be able to send out its S. O. S. signals for 24 hours.

The army plane, fully loaded for the flight, weighs 12,500 pounds, the Smith plane 4,572 pounds.

The Fokker has a cruising radius of 5,000 miles, Smith's plane 3,250 miles.

Lieutenant Maitland said he expected to complete the flight in about 24 or 27 hours. Smith said he planned on reaching the island in 24 hours and could beat the army plane if the latter had several hours lead.

The army plane is expected to consume about 50 gallons of gasoline an hour. The smaller competing monoplane is expected to consume 12 gallons an hour.

Smith planned to fly his plane at about 85 miles an hour for the first 1,000 miles and 114 miles an hour thereafter. The Fokker was expected to make about the same starting speed and finish at about 125 miles an hour.

PORTLAND, Ore., June 27. (AP)—Lieutenant Douglas Howard, Portland aviator, who has entered for the official non-stop flight to Honolulu, has received word that the motor for his new plane has been given a 12-hour test at San Diego. The motor worked perfectly, was the word sent Howard. He will name his plane "The Rose of Portland."

The flyer has also been notified that his entry has been received and officially recorded, and that entry blanks for the trip will be forwarded to him as soon as they are received.

slight build and took him to a downtown restaurant. At six a. m. M. A. Phelan, manager of the apartments, called to deliver the morning newspaper and the daily consignment of ice. He entered the apartment with a pass key, as was his custom, made his deliveries, and then called out her name. As he got no answer he believed she was asleep, he told police and went out.

A dozen or more men, according to best information available to police, called at her apartment Friday night. Police are endeavoring to get in communication with all of these in the hope they may furnish a definite clew.

The body was found, clad only in a silk dressing gown and silk stockings, on the slightly disarranged bed, with a quilt thrown over all except the feet. The woman's hands had been bound behind her back, her ankles had been tied together and a mans handkerchief use dto gag her. Towels and pillowslips were used to tie her feet and hands and to bind her throat.

Ben Glaser was brought back from Hood River today after he said he knew the person who committed the murder. He was closely quizzed by police inspectors and closely observed, and then Lieutenant Thatcher acting chief inspector said he intended to turn him over to county officials for a sanity hearing.

CAR CROWDED OFF ROAD BY TRAILER

Richardson be able to be up but cuts on both knees make walking difficult.

Describes Accident.

In describing the accident Dr. Richardson said that they were driving toward Weiser when a car driving at a high rate of speed came over a slight hill on the wrong side of the road and swerved to the left just before passing the Richardson car, but the trailer that was attached had swung over so far that the Richardson car was forced off the highway into a ditch and over a bank to the right, stopping about 15 feet down the 16-foot embankment Dr. and Mrs. Richardson account themselves fortunate that the car stopped when it did as it probably means saving both their lives.

The car lost a bumper and the rear fender was badly bruised.

MRS. UNDERWOOD HURT

Mrs. Cora Underwood was injured in an accident which occurred yesterday just north of the bridge near the Riverside park. James Ferris was going north over the bridge and another car was coming south, and Mrs. Underwood was walking along the road as the two cars were approaching each other.

The road being narrow, the right fender of Mr. Ferris' car struck Mrs. Underwood and dragged her about 15 feet. He immediately made report at the police station, which reads as follows: "This person was walking on right side of road. Was meeting car and did not have room to pass without coming to head on collision with car. Could not stop for party."

Mrs. Underwood is not thought to be seriously injured, although she was badly bruised.

been thoroughly explained by members of that organization to members of the board. As stated in the resolution, the directors believe that the establishment of a dehydrating plant here would help the fruit men and farmers to dispose of their products, especially their apples that are not in the first or second grades. It is expected that the Blue Mountain Packing company will make an effort to get their plant in operation by fall.

Of Two From Party Threaten Dismissal

MOSCOW, June 27 (AP)—Charged with treasonable speeches and violation of party discipline, Leon Trotsky and Gregory Zinovieff, once powerful figures in the councils of the all-Russian communist party, now are threatened with final dismissal from the party.

Their expulsion has been asked by the presidium of the central control committee and inasmuch as they have been demoted, disciplined and warned several times in the last few months, there appeared little doubt today that the presidium's recommendations would be followed by the party as a whole.

The presidium based its recommendation, among other things, on the allegation that Trotsky and Zinovieff had engaged in continuous attempts "to break party unity at a time of serious international complications, aggravated by partial failure of the Chinese revolution and of facilitating the activities of anti-soviet agitations within the soviet union."

Barber and Stern Indicted By Jury

LOS ANGELES, June 27. (AP)—The Julian Petroleum stock scandal today rocked the entire financial structure of the southwest when it was announced that Charles F. Stern, president of the Pacific Southwest Trust and Savings bank, and John E. Barber, president of the First Securities company, were among those indicted by the grand jury last week.

The two bank presidents, whose names appear at the very forefront of Los Angeles' financial who's who, are charged with three counts of embezzlement and one count of accepting a bankers' bonus. Bond was set in the indictment at $25,000 which Le Compte Davis, attorney, stood ready to make when the men appeared for arraignment probably later today.

JAPANESE ARE DISPOSED TO FAVOR BRITISH

the 1931 conference, from building any 35,000 tons battleships of which the British already possess two, the Nelson and Rodney. It is stated that the Americans undoubtedly will return a negative answer to such a suggestion if it is officially advanced.

Mr. Gibson has not yet been approached by Viscount Saito concerning the reported project for a perpetual peace pact between Japan and the United States but it is understood that any suggestion from the Japanese along this line will receive earnest consideration from the American delegation.

It is recognized that if Viscount Saito were able to return to Tokyo with a peace pact in his pocket, he would perhaps be less insistent upon demanding a higher ratio for Japan in auxiliary warcraft than was fixed for the largest warships at Washington.

The impression prevails that the Japanese are disposed to go more than half way in eradicating the feeling created in Japan by abolition of the gentlemen's agreement and the subsequent refusal of the American congress to permit any quota migration of Japanese into the United States.

May Point Way

In some quarters the conviction prevails that a treaty outlawing war between the two nations might later point a way to solution of the immigration problem, which is known to have wounded the Japanese dignity.

A British correspondent interested in obtaining the American view of the cruiser question asked Mr. Gibson today whether the United States needed many cruisers as a protection against rum runners. The chairman of the delegation answered: "I think rum runners are dealt with by a different kind of craft."

Alluding to the British attempts to reopen the Washington treaty, Mr. Gibson declared it would be a great mistake for the powers to have the Washington edifice tumble down about their ears in an endeavor to make what would certainly be a lopsided rearrangement, since both France and Italy were not participating actively in the present conference.

Arrangements were made today to have the French "informer" and the Italian "observer" present at all committee meetings, thus eliminating any possible impression on their part that they are being shut out of the tripartite negotiations.

Admiral Hilary P. Jones of the American delegation said today that the experts were striving to reach an agreement as to what type of warship would not be subject to limitation. In his opinion no restriction would be placed on such vessels as river gunboats used in China and mine sweepers.

Pomona Grange Entertained At Starkey Saturday

mant for several years, has not been recognized as an organization for the past few years.

Shortly after noon a picnic dinner was served in the R. E. Thomas grove which was especially well adapted for this part of the day's program. Many Union county fries and broilers sacrificed their lives for this dinner, as well as the larger fowls which were produced steaming from biz roasters. They were served to the accompaniment of salads and sandwiches, other cold meats, pickles, a long row of home made cakes, strawberries, cream and coffee. Immediately thereafter, the rodeo, arranged by the Starkey grange was staged. This program was quite varied and also interesting, good exhibitions of roping calves, riding bucking horses, mules and steers having been pulled off. These events were held in the corral on the Thomas ranch and occupied the major part of the afternoon.

After supper, served by the Starkey people, a closed session was again held when 30 or more members of that grange were given the fifth degree by the county degree team. With the exception of one, every member of the Meadow Brook grange has now received this degree. There are but two higher, the sixth which is the state degree and the seventh, which is the national degree. The work is interesting and was well exemplified by the county officers. The social events of the day were concluded with a dance held in the Wells granary with excellent music furnished by the Scott orchestra of Hilgard.

A speaking program which had been arranged and which included addresses by ex-Governor Walter M. Pierce, Field Historian Jamison of the extension service of Oregon Agricultural college and County Agent Avery was postponed until a later date on account of lack of time and because of the lateness of the hour together with the evidences of the approaching storm.

Coming events scheduled by the Pomona grange are the regular annual picnic to be held at the experiment station at Union July 9th and the county grange conference of October 29th. At this latter there will be reports received from the agriculture committee, a discussion of the home economics work, and the degrees of the order will be exemplified for the benefit of some of the younger granges.

Eagles Have Picnic At Riverside Park

Members of the Eagles lodge and their families enjoyed an all-day picnic at the park yesterday, with about 150 present. Picnic lunches were combined at tables in the pavilion, with ice cream furnished by the lodge. In the evening ice cream and "hot dogs" were served. A baseball game provided entertainment during the afternoon.
