Women voters turned out in large numbers for the recent Irish election. The gentle sex all over the world is becoming more proficient at strenuous games.

Foreman—"Don't you see that sign 'No hands wanted'?" Applicant—"Oh, yes, but I promise the boss I'll sure ask for a job today and that's why I applied here."

SALESMANSHIP! In response to my inquiry as to whether she carried such a thing in stock, the young woman in charge of one of New York's "health food" establishments produced a sample of three cereal substitutes for coffee. I examined them casually and asked her which was best. She did not know, she said—"They're all about the same, I guess."

"Which do you use?" I asked. "Me? I drink coffee," was her answer. "My Gawd, mister, if I didn't have a cuppa coffee first I'd die after I get up, 'd die!"

"In one hundred years the world will have a billion more people than it can feed," some one predicts. Well, it won't have them long.

"Your sister isn't reliable. She says she is 20 years of age, but she is 24."

"Well, you see, she didn't learn to count until she was 61."

"Will burying a black cat in the church yard at midnight do away with wars?" "Yes, if they are on the cat."

ARE THERE ANY BLUE MOOSE IN THEM THAT HILLS? President Coolidge rides 64 miles to and from his office in Rapid City where he transacts business until mid-afternoon. At the city he witnesses the first show-up of the hilarious fairs at the Arcade theater yesterday.

Without exaggeration this is the best comedy drama shown locally in a year. The story of three wives who find that their husbands go hunting, not for ducks as they claim, but for chicken, and who turn the tables on their deceivers by hiring three college boys to make love to them to arouse their husbands' jealousy, is screwingly funny.

The soft titles which accompany the action, the casting, direction and the story itself make, all together, a perfect picture.

Louise Fazenda, gorgeous blonde who insists on having a real Spanish lover with a kick, while she is at the business of getting even with hubby, is lovely and gives a perfect performance of a girl who is who turns love for the time of her life. While J. Farrell MacDonald as her duck hunting husband who finds out she had his wife was not an easy one she looked, brought down the house.

Ethel Water and Dorothy Phillips as the other two wives, and the three college boys hired to get the husbands for the occasion, do their share toward making "Cradle Snatchers" the unqualified success it is. An entertainment suspense from every angle.

Tonight "Cradle Snatchers" will be shown for the last time.

The playwright is a poor man's university, says a speaker. Oh yes, the editor adds, and some of the subscribers seem to be rushing their way.

AT THE THEATERS

"Held By the Law" Is Feature At Star Theater.

All the action and tragedy of a great prison drama, and the horror of an execution are shown with striking dramatic effect in "Held by the Law," the Universal-Jewel directed by Edward Lavigne which is the feature attraction at the Star theater today and Wednesday.

The climax of this fascinating mystery melodrama takes place within the prison walls, and as a proper setting for the sequence, a large portion of the interior of Star prison was reproduced with painstaking fidelity at Universal City.

The death cell, where murderers awaiting execution spent their last days, with the death watch on eye of the day of execution is shown, with Ray Lewis as the hapless prisoner, caught in a net of circumstantial evidence in which it is impossible for him to prove his innocence.

The prison settings were constructed from actual designs of the famous New York penitentiary, and the broad "electric chair" was built complete in every detail except for the death dealing current.

"Held by the Law" is based on an original photoplay written especially for Universal Pictures corporation by Hayward Miller, author of "Within the Law," "The Thirteenth Chair" and other screenplays.

Johanne Walker and Marguerite de la Motte, Ralph Lewis, Robert Ober, E. J. Cantello, Fred Kelsey, Maude Wayne and others are in the cast of the unusual production.

Some talks learn from experience, others never recover from them.

What this country really needs is good substitutes for radio bugs.

"Cradle Snatchers" Showing At Arcade Last Time Tonight

"Cradle Snatchers," a rich comedy drama, brought a full house of laughter, from the audience who witnessed the first show-up of the hilarious fairs at the Arcade theater yesterday.

Gloria Swanson Is Star In Sherrys Now at Sherrys

Exact duplicates of scenes from the historic opera Comique in Paris are reproduced in "The Love of Surya," Gloria Swanson's latest picture at the Sherry theatre, but these were obtained only after much difficulty.

The script for "The Love of Surya" called for scenes from the famous opera. Several months before work was started in Miss Swanson's New York studio she sent Rene Hubert, her designer, to Paris to make motion pictures of the institution.

Owing to an official ruling, the director of the opera Comique at first refused permission for any pictures to be made but after a special appeal had been made to the Minister of Beaux Arts, Miss Swanson's representative was allowed to use a "still" camera.

Even then he was instructed not to use flashlights and as a result it was necessary to make the pictures through time exposures. One hour and a half was required in setting the picture of the main auditorium and two weeks were consumed in completing a series of one hundred photographs.

"The Opera Comique scenes in 'The Love of Surya' will be used in the episode in which Miss Swanson plays the role of an opera singer. Several other well-known places in Paris, including the studio of Mrs. Flora Schofield, the artist, and the Chateau de Madrid are reproduced in Miss Swanson's film play which is at the Sherry theatre. Mr. Hubert obtained photographs and motion pictures of these places and three Berlin, the noted art director, mirrored them in making his sets. Comedy sketches, "In Deep."

HAVE NEW MASCOT

NEW YORK—The marines have a new mascot, Private Padgett, a pedigreed English bull dog with a wrinkled black and white face. Presented by English marines, he arrived on the Lexington. Captain Hartley is certain that the mascot is a real deal dog. Private Padgett had been locked in the captain's bath room and the captain entered without notice. He got out in a net except for a portion of his blue silk pajama coat.
