MENUS

By Sister Mary
BREAKFAST—Orange juice, cereal cooked with dates, cranberry graham toast, milk, coffee.
LUNCHEON—Creamed dried beef on toast, radishes and onions, strawberry bread pudding, milk, tea.
DINNER—Broiled perch, cucumber sauce, buttered steamed rice, cottage cheese salad, rhubarb pie, milk, coffee.

Very often the housewife will find only small oranges on the market just at this time of year. But she will also find that these same small oranges are deliciously juicy, sweet and quite cheap. Since most of us take our morning oranges in the liquid form it's the quality and price of the fruit more than the size that is of paramount importance.

Strawberry Braid Pudding
 One quart strawberries, 1 cup granulated sugar, 6 slices bread, butter, 3/4 cup whipping cream, 2 tablespoons powdered sugar, 1/2 teaspoon vanilla.
 Cut bread in slices 1/2 inch thick and remove crusts. The pieces should be about 4 inches square. Butter both sides of each slice. Wash and hull berries. Put layer for layer of berries and sugar in a smooth sauce pan and cook over a low fire for twenty minutes. The heat can be increased after the juice is drawn from the fruit. Put a slice of bread into a mold or serving dish, cover with a layer of hot berries and continue layer for layer until all is used, making the last layer of berries. Press down firmly and let stand until cool. Place on ice until thoroughly chilled. Whip cream until firm, sweeten with sugar and flavor with vanilla. Turn pudding out of mold and serve with whipped cream.

The Garden

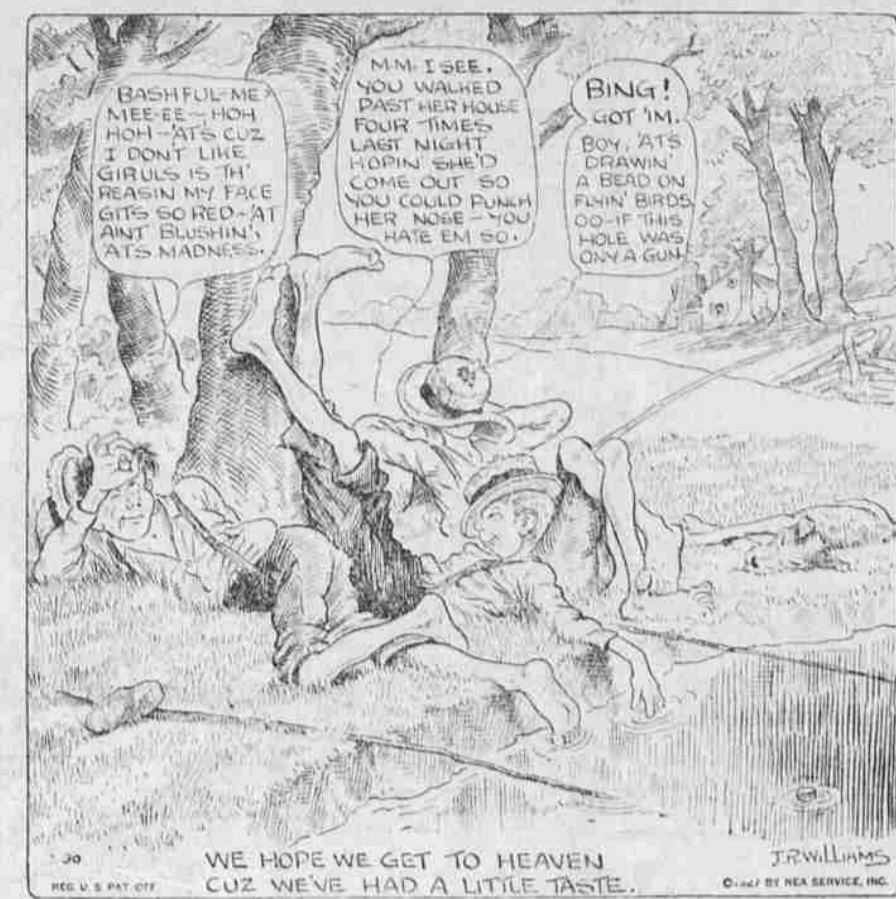

CALIFORNIA'S GARDEN GOLD
 We know very little about the botanist, Escholtz, or whoever it was that gave the name and attached it to one of the most beautiful of the California natives, the California poppies. But the name will be perpetuated in the Escholtz, the scientific name of this gorgeous bit of California gold that spreads over our gardens and which in addition to its original gold now comes in creams and crimsons and oranges and scarlet.

weather grower and like most of this type doesn't mind a late start in life provided it has the heat to speed it on its way. Like most of the poppy tribe it is difficult to transplant successfully so should be sown where it is to spend its life and thinned so that the survivors will have plenty of time to develop and send out their sprawling branches spangled with the brilliantly colored cups. The finely-cut gray-green foliage is ornamental in itself.

The orange types are the most brilliant for masses in the garden enhanced with occasional splashes of the scarlet and crimson varieties. In combination with blue cornflowers the yellow California poppies make beautiful hedges for table decoration and are one of the finest of the midsummer annuals for cutting. The poppies have a habit of closing at night but the closed flower, which often has a different color on the outside of the petals, is attractive.

The California poppy has the advantage of flourishing in hot dry situations that are too much for many of the more tender annuals and shares with the portulaca the reputation of being something of a salamander among plants. It is one of the flowers in the cutting garden that no gardener wants to be without.

In favored localities and with good protection, it sometimes survives well winters and breaks into early bloom but it cannot be wintered reliably, although some garden writers recommend that it be so treated. It is so easily grown as an annual that it is not worth the trouble.
