DOLLAR'S BUYING POWER IS GREAT

Pre-War Day Greenback Didn't Go So Far in Purchasing Automobile

The dollar of the "good old days" may have bought more food and clothing and paid more rent than it does today, but it certainly did not buy so much automobile. Some time ago, a greenback of 1914, when it was worth only 40 cents, could buy a new car. Today, it can buy only a used car.

In his interesting and informative article, "The Dollar's Buying Power," the author points out that the dollar of 1914, when it was worth only 40 cents, could buy a new car. Today, it can buy only a used car.
