HEALTH
USING EXTRA CARE WITH BABY'S FOOD IN SUMMER PREVENTS SICKNESS. By Edward Sheppard Rimer, M. D. New York City. Member Georgia Memorial Institute

Summer should be the ideal season for the child. He can be outdoors all day long. Nature provides much for his entertainment. But, unfortunately, certain dangers attend the hot weather. A surfeit of hot days, especially accompanied by humidity, lowers the vitality and the resistance of disease. The baby's digestion is impaired, and he is much more easily upset by change in his regime. The hot weather not only affects the baby, but it may spoil his food.

The most common diseases of children in summer are those involving the digestion—diarrhea, dysentery, and other disturbances of the stomach and bowels. The most common determinants of the digestive tract are, first, those due to over-eating, next improper food. Many parents carefully give the baby the formula ordered by the doctor throughout the first year. Then when it comes time to add solid food, they are guilty of all sorts of foolish indulgences, and the baby suffers.

The baby's diet should be just as vigorously observed in the summer as in the first. Bits from the table, over-rich food, desserts, including ice-cream, candy, cake, excess fruits, particularly artificial or partly decayed fruit all may be responsible for baby's illness.

Most dangerous of all is tainted or spoiled, or contaminated food. Milk, for example, may become spoiled through insufficient ice. Milk is a natural culture medium for germs. Certain bacteria are always present in cow's milk. Cow's milk is the basis of diet in part of the world. All artificial baby bottles, hence the importance of keeping this milk clean cannot be over-emphasized. Keep the milk covered in the ice box, and buy the purest milk you can get. The danger from other spoiled foods is much less because none are so readily affected by warmth and contamination and, too, because milk forms so great a part of the young child's diet.

Whoever is responsible for the child's food should always taste everything that is offered. In this way spoilage may often be detected.

Long hours of sleep are essential to health. The child who is allowed to stay up late usually suffers from malnutrition or nervousness, or both. The good effect of a summer in the country may be spoiled by lack of proper rest and sleep.

At the first evidence of illness, stop giving all food. Water may be given in small amounts at frequent intervals. But because disease germs progress so rapidly in infants, do not wait for sleeping symptoms before consulting your family physician.

New Comedy Hit Is Showing At The Arcade

"Built for laughs."

This is the only phrase that would describe "The Catbans and the Murphys." Kathleen Morris' funny romance of Irish life, as transferred to the screen by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and showing at the Arcade Theater, today and Thursday.

It is not a collection of laughs—it is literally one prolonged howl of mirth. From the opening battle of the Catbans and the Murphys to the final fade-out—with the family in battle again—it's a series of comical combats, tangled situations and hilarious happenings.

Sally O'Neil scores a new triumph as Ellen Catban, heroine of the comical romance. She and Larry Gray supply the romances, with just a bit of a heart throbs, that is woven through the collection of chuckles, giggles and gasps that comes from the picture. Miss O'Neil does some of the best work in her brief but eventful career as the little Irish girl.

Joe Tompkins, famous for "Billie's Encircled Romance," in the role of the estimable "Mrs. Catbans" in constant battle with the sharp-tongued "Mrs. Murphy," as played by Polly Moran. Gertrude Gimstead, as the beautiful "Maudie Murphy," has another lot of love interest—with the comical Eddie Gibson as her lover—a combination so incongruous that in itself it is comedy to gaze upon.

George Hill, who gave the world "Till It Is the Marines," directed the new picture—and discloses that his forte is whimsical comedy. All the comedy is based in natural situations and real-life happenings—all his characters are human beings, hence their convincing qualities.

Frank Currier, Drew Demaree, Tom Lewis, Turner Savage, Monty O'Grady, Dawn O'Bay, Jackie Coogan and many other clever people appear in well-contrived roles in the new comedy classic, which Frances Marion adapted to the screen.

Claire Windsor And Lytell Near Divorce Action

FOR ANKLETON, July 13. (AP)—The divorcee says Claire Windsor, film star, and her Lytell, stage and screen actor, have separated and that the question of a reconciliation would be discussed at a conference with attorneys today.

According to the paper, Miss Windsor, in a statement given out from the home of her mother, where she went after leaving her husband, Lytell, said she and Lytell, with their attorneys, W. L. Fisher and Michael Scobie, would meet today and, if the marital rift could not be bridged, a property settlement discussed and divorce proceedings started by the couple.

In her statement, Miss Windsor is quoted as saying the long absence of Lytell on southern tours was the chief cause of the separation. She said that Lytell left her on a tour in August, 1926, and that she had seen little of him until his return a month ago.

"Misunderstandings arise when people are separated that long," the actress said. Then, referring to the possible reconciliation, she added:

"It is possible that we may patch this trouble up."

A break between Lytell and his wife long has been rumored in the film colony but had been consistently denied by the actor and his wife.

They were married at Jersey.
