Richard Dix In "Man Power" At Arcade

"Last Outlaw" At Star Is Virile Drama

Automobiles, aeroplanes, motorboats and even bicycles have furnished the background for motion picture drama, but until Richard Dix began "Man Power" for Paramount the lumbering, colossal tractor had never been glorified in film. Only an imaginative scenario writer who had been through the war could see possibilities in them. The results are on view at the Arcade theater today and Saturday.

"Man Power" is not a war picture, although there is a dash of the battlefield to indicate that Richard Dix had been an officer before reaching the lowly state of a box car wanderer hopelessly looking for a job. Glimpses of Mary Brian, beautiful daughter of the president of the Stoddard Manufacturing company, starts him on a career as a mechanic.

What he does with a tractor after that is startling. To save the inhabitants of a valley from the menace of a broken dam, Dix pulls supplies through a rain storm over a slippery road, over ditches, up mountain sides across a plateau and into a gulch. Ordinarily, cameramen are not excitable, but Ed Croninger and the others engaged on "Man Power" admit they would rather photograph jungle animals than a tractor on a rampage. A lion, for instance, can be shot when he gets out of control, but a tractor will shed bullets as well as rain, and anything that gets in its way is doomed.

Dix admits he was glad when it was finished.

It was directed by Clarence Badger.

Remodeling Time
At this time of year many people think of remodeling their homes—some have the work done while away on vacations, others use the vacation period to personally supervise the work.

The installation of 5/8 inch thick oak flooring over old worn floors is an important remodeling idea—so is the use of Bruce Code-line closet lining in clothes closets.
