HEALTH

DANGEROUS TO PERMIT SKIN TO ENTER BREAKS IN GERM

By L. J. McCoy, M. D., Seattle, Wash.

Member Georgia Memorial Institute. If the question were asked, "Which drug serves the greatest household need?" what would be the answer?

It is doubtful if the druggist himself could answer, yet it seems to me that iodine solution is the answer, and should have a place in every household, first aid kit, and emergency outfit.

There are other solutions that are used as substitutes for iodine, and great claim is made for their efficiency. But iodine still maintains a high position as a disinfectant, and as a counter-irritant. To my mind there is nothing that equals it for safe, general, external use.

Scalpaches, including children, should know how to apply it. Children, particularly, are subject to more or less severe wounds, especially of the exposed parts. I feel confident that many infections of every degree of severity, from mere festers to fatal blood poisoning, could be prevented each year if the more general use of iodine solution could be brought about with every break in the skin.

Skin breaks, whether cuts, blisters, abrasions, punctures, etc., should be painted with a three to five per cent solution of iodine. The most trivial wound may lead to very dire consequences, through infection. I have seen lockjaw, which was fatal in 48 hours, develop from a slight break in the skin of the upper arm, resulting from a fall on the street.

Many arms, legs and fingers have been sacrificed because of neglect in caring for a pin prick, a scratch, or a puncture. President Coolidge lost his son as the result of infection originating on his foot.

We are constantly besieged by germs, and it requires only a pin prick to allow them to enter our bodies which form an excellent medium for their propagation. So

CHILE PLACES WOMEN IN MEN'S POSITIONS

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP)—In keeping with the Chilean government's program of modernization and economy, it has been announced that attempts will be made to substitute women for men in certain classes of work, leaving the country's men free for more active forms of labor.

Colonel Carlos Dinez, president-elect of Chile, made his announcement in a letter to a committee in charge of arranging an exposition of women's work.

According to the government's plan, women would be employed to replace men throughout the country in educational and the lighter forms of industrial and commercial work.
