PORTLAND, Ore., July 25 (AP)—The local produce market opened this morning with prices mostly steady with last week's close, excepting for several lines of fruit.

Cantaloupes and honeydew melons remain at 10c apiece for average-sized melons and 5 cents for smaller sized lots in a few instances. Supplies continue strong.

Plenty of first quality raspberries may be had at 10c per box. Blackcaps are priced the same and loganberries are plentiful at 8c per box, 2 for 15c.

Tomatoes are easy at 12c a pound retail.

Potato receipts are greater and prices tend to be lower, with Oregon Burbanks selling for 10 pounds for 25 cents, retail.

Country dressed meats and poultry opened slow this morning and barely steady at Saturday's prices. Lambs are easy at 29 cents, prime hogs at around 13 cents and veal 18 to 19 cents. Light hens continue to move slowly at 18 cents.

Butter and egg prices are unchanged from Saturday but dealers are expecting butter to advance again shortly since production in the local territory is falling off.

General Motors Move Up Above 220 in Exchange

NEW YORK, July 25 (AP)—Stock prices continued to push forward today despite heavy profit-taking and a stiffening of call money rates. Standard industrials led the upswing in which more than a score issues, including General Motors, American Tobacco, Radio Corporation and Timken Bearing attained new peak prices.

General Motors climbed above 220 for the first time, but Mack Trucks was heavy. U. S. Cast Iron Pipe was hammered down 5 points and weakness cropped out in Paramount, Famous Players and a few other specialties, but it failed to halt the rising trend elsewhere.

Texas and Pacific fell back 2½ points and Southern Railway and several others yielded a point or more. Lehigh Valley received better support.

The closing was strong. The lowering of the call money rate to 3½ per cent late in the afternoon was responsible for a fresh wave of buying in the last hour, when United States, General Motors and others reached their best prices.

Total sales approximated 1,500,000 shares.

Advertisements Are Our Promises

People sometimes have an inclination to pass over advertising matter with the slighting statement, "Oh that's only an ad." They fail to realize the amount of information these advertisements give to make life easier and more worth the living for them.

There are several kinds of advertisements that the J. C. Penney Company try never to publish. False statements are seldom permitted in any newspaper, but we consider it just as wrong to write misleading copy. We do not promise that our cosmetics will work miracles with your complexion, and when you read our printed promise that a fabric will wash, you may be sure that behind it stands the honor of a great Company.

We like to feel that our advertisements deserve consideration from a news standpoint too. We strive to tell you something about the modern style trends, the opportunities to save money for the family budget, and new uses for old products.

First of all, our Advertising aims to be truthful, but we try to be newsy as well.

"Afraid To Tell His Banker or His Wife"

You've often heard of someone who has made an "investment" that he is a little ashamed of after the deal is closed and the high-powered salesman's spell is off. And when he's "afraid to tell his banker or his wife" you are nearly convinced that the money went into a doubtful investment.

Stocks and bonds merely represent loaned money. They are available in small units to be able to attract larger numbers of people. And when you buy, you are loaning your money to the business or corporation so that it can be used in the operation of its affairs.

You can be promised a variety of interest rates. If the proposition is unquestionably sound and money for it is therefore easy to get, the interest rate offered is naturally low. And as the surety of return and the scarcity of investors' money change, higher rates of interest are offered.

Not all securities paying a high return are unsafe, of course, but there are certain definite rules of finance governing the money market that are well known and that serve as a guide for investing. Your banker is familiar with these and with securities you may be considering—or he can investigate for you. We are always glad to do that and glad to counsel with you so that your money earns the highest reasonable return and yet is safe from loss.
