The race unquestionably has its faults but, on the whole, we are rather glad that Kee decided to go in for marriage, rather than a career.

That brevity is the soul of wit. Well, if that's the case, women's clothes are sure becoming too funny for words.

1st Friend: "Where have you been today?"
2nd Friend: "To Jack's funeral."
1st Friend: "Is Jack dead?"
2nd Friend: "Well, if he ain't he's played a dirty trick on him."

AT THE THEATERS

"The Galloping Gobs" At Arcade Theater Thursday Only

When two sailors try to operate a ranch what happens? The answer will be found in "The Galloping Gobs" playing at the Star Theater Thursday only. Buffalo Bill Jr. is the star of this unusual Western feature and is supported by a superb cast of talented players. For leading lady, producer Lester F. Scott, Jr. selected Betty Baker, a Southern beauty of rare charm and personality. Miss Baker has been playing the lead opposite Harry Langdon in "Long Pants" and previous to that was a dancer on the New York stage. For comedy relief Morgan Brown was cast as the pal of Buffalo and supplies many laughs in just the right spot. In this picture with the anarchistic title, two sailors get shore leave and then, in a poker game, win a ranch from an old fellow who owes much in taxes. The two gobs go out to run the ranch and then the excitement starts in earnest. Buffalo Bill Jr. gets a chance at a bucking horse who looks as no horse has ever bucked before. But, being a sailor who has ridden the bitowy waving, he is able to ride the broncho.

Throughout the story a sweet love theme winds its way and as the last scenes flash on the screen everyone is proud and happy, even Omb who has married a ranch widow. Richard Thorpe is the director. A two-reel comedy and a fable will also be shown.

Colleen Moore's Newest Picture At Arcade Thursday

No one need pity the "old maid." Her unwed state is her own fault. At least Colleen Moore, star of "Naughty But Nice," her newest First National picture which will be shown at the Arcade Theater Thursday, Friday and Saturday, says that any girl can marry the man of her choice if she wants him badly enough, and she presents an example of what she means in this photoplay.

"It's just a matter of technique," Miss Moore explains. "Women have always permitted men to think that they were making a conquest when they marched down the aisle to the altar, but many a bride has been worn to tatters by the chumpies within it. "All these hard-headed bachelors who make such a point of having preserved their freedom actually are still free because no girl has ever found them sufficiently interesting to really want to marry them. No man can escape his own wedding since a member of the fair sex has definitely and finally made up her mind she wants him for life.

"Her method of landing him for a husband may be the one I use as Berenice Summers in 'Naughty But Nice' to obtain the city's most eligible beau somewhat against his original intention, or it may be a method worked out for the specific problem at hand. Opposition and helplessness are both efficient aids; but no matter what the procedure, that man is certain to be parading to the minister eventually, and he'll be convinced that it is his own idea."

"That Model From Paris," which was suggested by the Goncourts' Morris story, "The Right To Live" will be the feature at the Colonial Theater for Thursday and Friday. It is a picture that holds one's interest from its very start to the finish.

The story, as it unfolded on the screen, tells of a little plain girl who had not kept up with the times in so far as bobbed hair and cosmetics were concerned, who was suddenly thrust into a world of beautiful women and gay men, only to find herself a very much sought after young lady.

The picture is chock full of entertainment and a great deal of the credit is due to the portrayal of the various roles by an unusually good cast of screen favorites. Margaret Mack, who plays the title role is beautiful, charming and a screen player of great promise. Bert Lyell, always a favorite, is seen in one of his best roles, while
