Bridge Dedicated To More Than Century of Peaceful Relations

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 6 (AP)—A span of stone and steel across the Niagara river stood today officially dedicated to more than a century of peaceful relations between the United States and Great Britain.

Dedication ceremonies, attended by the Prince of Wales, his younger brother, Prince George, the President Charles G. Dawes, the prime ministers of Great Britain, Canada and the province of Ontario, Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg, Governor Alfred E. Smith and other officials, brought to a successful culmination 17 years of effort to have the Niagara crossed at Buffalo by a voluntary bridge.

The common keynote of the speeches at the exercises took the form of a mutual British and American pledge of friendship, despite the outward clash of interests at the recent Geneva meeting over the cruiser problem.

The official spokesman of the two governments, Premier Baldwin and Secretary Kellogg, touched very lightly on the Geneva failure, but Vice President Dawes, who today was the guest of the dominion of Canada in Toronto, seized the opportunity to declare that the instinct of self-preservation bound the English speaking peoples together in a bond that "will never break."

Addressing himself directly to the Great Britain, Dawes declared it was "unthinkable" that the Great Britain and the U. S. should pledge to the principles of naval equality would enter any competitive building programs "because their experts temporarily disagreed."
