Tint Furs New Hue At Paris' Opening Shows

PARIS (AP)—Parriers were determined to present furs in any but their natural colors.

Even the lovely animal, ordinarily unincorporated and inexpensive, have been so treated for the winter season that their pelts have an unfamiliar look and prices are astonishing.

Moleskin, one of the comparatively inexpensive furs in France, is a victim of camouflage, this fall. The designers at one house dye moleskin the beige tints of mink and work the skins in light and dark stripes so that the effect is much like that of mink, and the price also.

Never afraid to palat the tit, Parisian furrier offer tinted red ermine for fall. Long coats and short jackets of tinted ermine are being shown in one of the most exclusive fur houses.

One of the prettiest versions of tinted ermine is soft beige color, the shade of summer ermine reproduced in the expensive winter variety. Some of these coats are worked in horizontal stripes worked together to imitate the coloring of the ermine.

Metal stitching is seen on many linings of the best furs this season. Blue and purple tints are found in a new kind of gray squirrel which a Paris fur dealer claims has been especially bred for his house. Even in a season of thick furs the fur differs from a dyed skin in that gray hairs are interspersed evenly throughout the pelt. The house sponsoring the new fur calls it blue squirrel.

Library To Serve Rural Districts

SALEM, Ore., Aug. 12 (AP)—The people of the rural districts of Oregon who are without library privileges are to receive the benefits of the state library as thoroughly as possible before the library service in the cities of the state is extended, Miss Cornelia Maxym, state librarian, said at a meeting of the library board yesterday. The board agreed with this policy. The library is functioning to the satisfaction of the rural patrons in spite of several items in appropriation by the last legislature, Miss Maxym said. The department suffers a book shortage, however, because of low funds.

The librarian reported that the library takes care of the library needs of 1267 out of the 1617 one-room schools in the state. More books, she said, are needed for this work.

Tablets, found in Babylonian show that banking was carried on there 5000 years ago. There's a good political job waiting for some archeologist who will dig up a tablet on Babylonian farm relief.
