MENUS

By Sister Mary
BREAKFAST—Stewed prunes, cereal, cream, crisp toast, marmalade, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—New potatoes scalloped with hard cooked eggs, celery, nut and raisin bread, chilled watermelon, milk, tea.

DINNER—Cold hennin, radishes, creamed veal, rice and vegetable salad, berry rotly-poly, milk, coffee.

The dinner salad is quite substantial and takes the place of the extra dinner vegetable.

Hot and Vegetable Salad
One cup well cooked rice, 1 sweet green pepper, 1 pimiento, 2 teaspoon onion juice, 4 smooth medium-sized tomatoes, 2 tablespoon tomato catsup, 1/2 cup French dressing, lettuce.

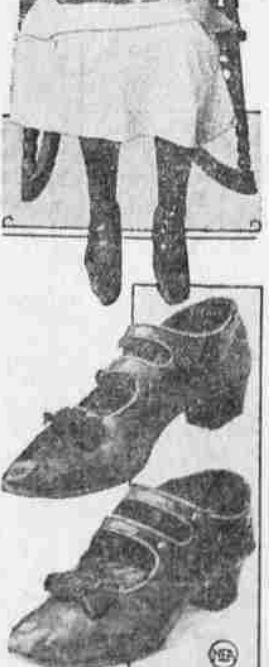

Scald tomatoes, dip into cold water and slip off the skin. Scald pepper and slip off the skin, removing the seeds. Remove seeds and white pith and mince flesh. Mince pimiento. Combine rice, pepper, pimiento and onion juice. Add enough French dressing to make cups or molds about the size of the tomatoes. Rub the molds with olive oil before packing with rice mixture. Chill for several hours. Unmold on a bed of lettuce, surrounding each mold with quarter sections of tomato.

Mash cheese slightly and beat in remaining dressing. Pour over molds of rice and tomatoes and serve.

WOMEN HALT TRAIN

ADANA, Turkey—A fire hose is nothing much to some Turkish women when their husbands are on strike. Fifteen on the Anatolian railroad were out. Sixty women lay on the rails in front of a train, notwithstanding a good ducking. They held up the train several hours till dragged off by the police.

Usually, when the husband beats, producing the wife begin retreating.

16 Years
The high price of shoes is one thing that isn't worrying Grandma Sarah Jane Punderburk of Birmingham, Ala., these days. She bought a pair 16 years ago and she's still wearing them! What's more, she has worn them nearly every day, and has had them half-soled only once. The shoes are shown below—slightly worn but still serviceable. They cost $100 when new.

HEALTH

WHAT IS PSYCHOANALYSIS? By A. A. Brill, M. D., New York City

That hysterical symptoms were the result of painful and disagreeable experiences to which the patient could not react at the time of their occurrence; and that the symptoms vanished when the physician succeeded in reawakening the memories and the feelings that went with them, provided the patient discussed all the details and gave free play to his emotions. This was the startling conclusion of Freud and Breuer in 1895, which laid the foundation of a new mental science.

They showed that painful memories are not forgotten, but rather pushed away down into the unconscious mind, where they remain in a state of repression until they are converted into a physical symptom. An unrelieved insult may in this way become an excruciating pain in the face; a disagreeable episode, a paralysis; and a strong but unattainable wish, a chronic repetition of nausea or vomiting spells. Such symptoms continued for years, until the patient's memory was revived through hypnosis, when he was encouraged to purge himself, as it were, of these painful reminiscences. The discovery of this "cathartic method" in nervous diseases was well received by the medical profession.

Through a lack of preparation in nervous and mental diseases, however, soon lost interest, when Freud became more and more engrossed in the problem. As he continued to work alone he soon found that not all people could be hypnotized, and that hypnosis masked the workings of the mind. This caused him to drop hypnosis and develop what he called psychoanalysis. He instructed the patient to concentrate his mind on the symptoms and repeat everything that came to him, to omit nothing whatever, regardless of whether the idea seemed important or trifling, proper or improper. This is the so-called method of "free association" which is not so simple a process as it might seem to be. The repressed material can only be brought up with great effort, as the same forces which submerged it tend to keep it from coming to consciousness. This resistance, however, can be overcome if there is the right rapport between physician and patient.

Left-over egg yolks have many uses. They are a valuable source of iron and so should be utilized. They may be hard-boiled in a double boiler, mashed and seasoned for sandwich filler. Raw, or hard-cooked yolks, make a good foundation for salad dressing.

GRANTS PASS HIGHWAY MAN IS CRITICIZED

DUNSMUIR, Ore., Aug. 15 (AP)—Hot debate over the utility of building an agent at Grants Pass, Ore., to solicit travel for the Pacific highway, marked the meeting here Saturday of more than 100 delegates from the 21 counties in the regional conference. A resolution in service with the present agent's duties failed to carry. The agent's duties comprise efforts to direct traffic over the Pacific highway instead of the Redwood highway, a competitive route. Some of the delegates contended that the agent was successful in his efforts, while others disputed his usefulness.

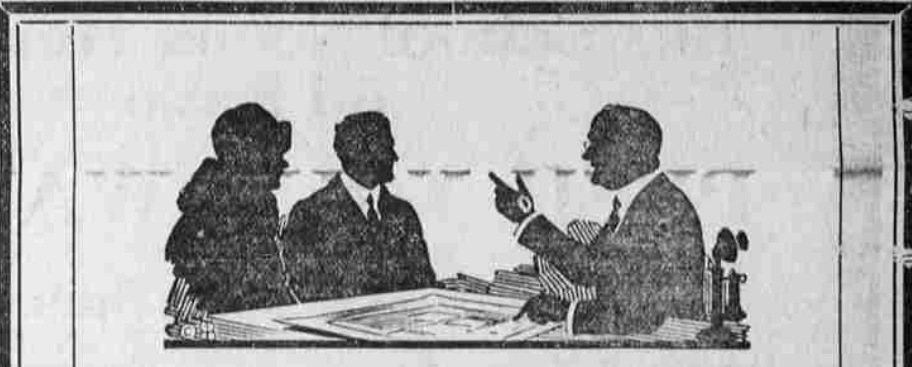

Among the speakers were Simon J. Lubin, of Sacramento, president of the council; State Senator James H. Allen, of Sacramento; Assemblyman J. M. Murphy, of Wood; and Superior Judge T. J. Lattrell, of Yreka.

The man who is continually cracking jokes about women's clothes, has very little to talk about.
