The average butterfly is said to have between five and six thousand eyes. Man doesn't need anywhere near that many. He can see enough these days with only two.

Partner (to new farmhand): Well, Pat, have you counted all the chickens?" Pat: "Yes, sir, sure I counted all of 'em 'cept one."

Partner: "Why, what do you mean?" Pat: "Well, sir, that little white one run around so fast I couldn't count him, but I counted all the rest."

"What," queries the fashion department of the Omaha (Nebr.) Herald, "has become of the old-fashioned sash?" It still abounds, dearie, only nowadays it is called a skirt.

The reason some men find it so difficult to mend their ways is because they need the stitch in time.

Two women were passing a butcher's shop where a pig's head was on display, with a lemon in its mouth.

"There, Liz," exclaimed one of the women, "that reminds me that I promised to get a new pipe for Joe."

"The adventures he has in his search for Duxbury and the situations in which he finds himself form the plot of the story and its many hilarious episodes.

Lou Tollegen plays the role of Duxbury, Margaret Livingston, Claire Adams, Marcela Daly and Emily Filizy are the wives. Others in the cast are Gertrude Clark, Eric Mayne, Charles Lane and Henry Soley. Emmett Flynn directed production.

"Red Hot Leather" a Universal film starring Western is the second feature in the double program being presented at the Star theater today and Thursday.

Jack Hoxie, famous portrayer of Western roles, plays the leading part that of a young rancher, who devotes his every effort to trying to save his father's ranch from being foreclosed.

The holder of the mortgage discovers all on the property and he conspires with his son to prevent the owners from securing the necessary loans to clear title on the ranch.

Needless to say, of course, Jack comes out ahead but the manner of his accomplishing his aim is achieved in a novel and most unexpected manner. His ability at horsemanship is put to the severest of tests and in many sequences he performs feats of strength and agility that are nothing short of marvelous.

Dainty Eula Gregory, plays the leading feminine supporting role. She gives to her performance a charm and sweet dignity that adds materially to the appeal of the picture.

"The Climbers" at the Colonial Last Time Today

"The Climbers" at the Colonial for the last time today is one of the very best vehicles given Miss Rich for the display of her voice and charm as well as her skill as equestrienne and marksman.

The scenes are laid in Old Spain at the Court of Ferdinand VII who ruled in the early part of the nineteenth century, and in that part of America then known as New Spain.

The story has to do with the fate of the Duchess of Aragon, separated from her young daughter, and banished from Spain, through the machinations of a heartless climber, the Countess Vega.

In America the Duchess, exiled against the world, grows harsh and dominating and gains great wealth and the hatred of the peasantry who she persecutes. The man Cordova, also exiled from Spain becomes a bandit leader, and coming to the Duchess' hacienda, with the intention of taking her child, decides he prefers to seal her heart. He leaves the leadership of his band in wounded protection of the beautiful Duchess, protects her daughter from the outlaws and at last brings the girl who has wandered from Spain in the vain hope of finding her mother, to her mother's side.

"The Climbers" is good, honest melodrama, thrilling and glamorous, and filled with fair romance. It should not be missed.

Earl Carroll probably will be partial to shower baths in the future.

AT THE THEATERS

Double Program At The Star Today

"Married Alive" is the screen version of a novel by Ralph Strass, the plot revolving about a modern Bluebeard who carried into actual practice of polygamy theories of the serious Professor Orme. Their lives became strangely intertwined and in the end the professor forsakes his theories to bring the polygamously inclined Duxbury to justice.

With the final assembling of several spectacular scenes of the Battle of Jutland, including the sinking of a part of the German fleet, Robert Kane's epic of the Navy is at last ready for release. The special which was four months in the making and cost more than $1,000,000, is to be shown at the Arcade theater Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The pictures of the actual marine battle were borrowed from the German and British Navy Departments, while the United States Navy Department co-operated in the production of the picture by lending several vessels of the American battle squadron in action during the war, from which were taken many thrilling scenes.

The return of the fleet to New York harbor, following the Armistice, the reception by the Secretaries of War and Navy, Newton Huber and Joseph Daniels, and the embarking and disembarking of the first troops, are other scenic highlights of the film which tells a dramatic tale of "The Bridge of Ships" across which two million American soldiers were ushered to France during the war.

Dorothy Mackaill, Lowell Sherman, Lawrence Gray, William Collier, Jr., Ian Keith, Jack Oakroyd, Lane Holmes, Glad Kane, Vincent Serrano and Eddie Gribben head the cast, which includes about fifty senior and junior officers from the Brooklyn Navy Yard, from which were recruited for several scenes more than 1,500 enlisted men, stationed on the U. S. S. Milwaukee, the U. S. S. Milwaukee, the U. S. S. Richmond, and the U. S. S. Hobbin.
