Home From Trip—
All legion posts in Western Oregon are unusually active, declares Otis Palmer, who, with Mrs. Palmer, returned home last night from a week's trip in Western Oregon. An example cited by Mr. Palmer, was the legion air circus at Silverton as the opening feature of the legion air field, just completed for use. While this is one of the first air fields to be owned and operated by the legion it will follow the example, says Mr. Palmer. "The air circus was a large event, well attended, and well worth while," he continued. "Ten planes in exhibition and racing events made the afternoon an exciting one. The air field means something to Silverton and is an excellent undertaking on the part of the legion," added Mr. Palmer. Mr. Palmer, who is legion commissioner for this district was called to Portland a week ago Monday to attend a state executive meeting and Mr. and Mrs. Palmer included Silverton, Independence, and Newport on their stop before returning. They made the trip by car.

FISH WHEEL LAW BRINGS MORE SALMON

... Approximately 15,000,000 salmon are released each year and the number is growing steadily. Carloads of salmon are shipped to Wallowa for feeding the young fish during the period in which they are kept at the hatchery. Before being released each fish is clipped on the fin for identification when they return, after four years, to spawn. It is always a source of interest to workers at the hatchery to trace the year in which the fish was released on the fin.

Long Legal Fight

Born over trail, counsel succeeded, counsel lost, the fight went on until eight months for a new trial had been argued and the Massachusetts supreme court had three times been asked to pass upon exception. Even after appeal had been pronounced last April, there remained the review of the whole case conducted by Governor Alvan T. Fuller and his advisory committee.
