GERMAN COURT DECISION FAVORS AIR COMPANIES

BERLIN (AP)—The German supreme court has decided that private air transport companies cannot be held liable for loss of life, for injuries or for loss of goods carried by air.

Action for damages according to this court, could only be brought if the carrying company were a state organization or held a monopoly, in which latter case the traveler could plead force majeure. Meanwhile, a "non-liability" clause which appears on the tickets of different flying companies, holds good at law, it is declared.

The German Lufthansa, among two or three other European flying concerns, has solved the difficulty by insuring all their passengers against loss of life or limb.

Other European courts, notably the courts of cassation of Paris, Rome and Berlin, have decided that the non-liability clause is in fact and cannot be enforced at law.

AT THE THEATERS

"First Night" At Colonial Is Farce Comedy

"The First Night" is showing for the first time at the Colonial theater and it can unqualifiedly be called one of the best laugh-provoking pictures that has been seen here in some time.

Here is a farce comedy that runs the gamut of laughter—from silent chuckles to loud guffaws, and from the way the audience reacted to the extremely humorous situations, there is no doubt that they all were unanimous in voting it a real house-changer.

In brief the plot of the story which was written by Frederick Sager tells of the trials and tribulations of a young couple, who have eloped, the bride to wit a former sailor, and the groom to escape from the clutches of an attractive Frenchwoman who claimed the handsome doctor as her husband. The rejected sailor, misapprehending as the Frenchwoman makes the young couple's life a continuous misery, and it is only towards the very end of the picture that he is discovered in his true light, and the young lovers left to themselves.

Burt Lyster playing the leading role of the doctor is faultless in his role, while Dorothy Byers as the young bride adds a zest and beauty to an otherwise perfect farce comedy. The supporting cast of players include Walter Hiera, Harry Myers, Frederic Kover, Lila Lodie, Hazel Kesteven, Joan Standish, Nellie By Baker and James Mark. Richard Thorpe handled the directorial and in a more than satisfactory manner.

The picture will be the feature attraction at this theater until Friday.

The police commissioner of Portland promises music as a cure for crime. Certainly, commissioner, if you can only get them to face it, and so on.

Babe Ruth At Star In "Babe Comes Home"

Baseball, liberally mixed with comedy and romance, makes "Babe Comes Home," which the Star theater is offering for the first time, tonight, the leading sport picture of the season.

At the head of the cast is George Herman ("Babe") Ruth, the mighty home run king, who is responsible not only for the thrilling baseball with which the picture is spiced, but also some excellent comedy character acting. Ruth extends his facility to film acting in surprising fashion.

Opposite the sensational slugger is Anna Q. Nilsson, at her very best. The love affair worked out between the blonde Swedish star and Ruth is novel, comical, and at times touching; nothing of its kind has been so before. In all the screen's past history of romance, no other picture has so effectively combined the role of a laundry girl who falls in love with the big ball star of the picture. Louise Fazenda is also featured in an exceptionally entertaining comedy part.

Ruth as the baseball star does not force the spectators to use their imagination, for he is, of course, ideally cast. The surprise comes in his skill in the rest of his acting. An admirable cast that includes Ethel Shannon, Lou Archer and Arthur Stone, appears. Ted White directed "Babe Comes Home."

This story which appeared originally in a magazine under the title "Babe With Soap," is one of Gerald Beaumont's happiest sports yarns, and the producers have added to its comedy punch and charm.

A comedy and screen snapshots add much to the program.
