RATS' UPKEEP EXPENSIVE

AMHERST, Mass.—New England farmers have discovered that they have been paying high for the doubtful pleasure of supporting rats. It costs $2 a year to feed each rat in New England, according to E. M. Mills, who is directing the work for rodent control for the U. S. Department of Agriculture. He estimates that New England loses $16,000,000 a year through the depredations of this pest.

MENUS

By Sister Mary
BREAKFAST—Sliced poached cereal, cream, corned beef hash, crisp toast, milk, coffee.
LUNCHEON—Potato and parsley soup,raham bread and butter sandwiches, frozen cheese salad, coconut wafers, lemonade.
DINNER—Breaded veal cutlets, tomato sauce, scalloped potatoes and onions, beef and lettuce salad, honeydew melon with lemon ice, milk coffee.

If the lemon ice is not convenient to provide, serve sections of lemon with the melon. Be sure the fruit is very cold before serving.

Frozen Cheese Salad
One and one-half cups cottage cheese, 1 cup whipping cream, 1/2 cup hard-boiled currants, 1/4 teaspoon salt, chilled lettuce, French dressing.
Add jam and salt to cheese, fold in cream whipped until stiff. Turn into a mold and pack in ice and salt. Let stand four hours. Turn out of mold, cut in slices and arrange on a bed of lettuce. Pour over French dressing made a little sweet and serve at once.
The dressing should not be really sweet but the sharpness of the lemon should be tempered.

PARISIANS FAVOR ROOF GARDENS

PARIS (AP)—Roof gardens are growing in favor in Paris. For many years the extremely exclusive Automobile Club of France had the fashion all to itself. The garden there is very realistic and there is an irregular fountain that masquerades as a miniature lake. In summer the men—for no women ever are admitted—have dinner where they can see Paris all about them.

A number of homes lately have been built with flat enclosed roofs much in the Moorish style. The Louvre, the Bank of France and similar buildings have had their flat roofs transformed by energetic employees.
