Janet Gaynor Is Star in "2 Girls Wanted"

With Janet Gaynor playing as a star for the first time and a fine cast of players in support, "2 Girls Wanted," Fox Film's version of the John Golden stage hit, will be shown at the Arcade Theater Sunday only. Unlike the tragic little Paris street wail in "7th Heaven," the characterization of whom brought fame to Miss Gaynor, her Mariana in this picture is a happy, plucky, young American miss. It is a role that is peculiarly suited to Miss Gaynor and one in which she gives probably the best interpretation of her career.

The story of "2 Girls Wanted" is of absorbing interest, highly romantic and speeded with whimsical humor as well as pathos and heart throbs. It deals with two sisters fighting for a living in New York, with Miss Gaynor as the one who is forced in a last desperate effort to get a job by masquerading as a boy. This is made necessary because her sister, played by Marie Mosquini, is home suffering from an injury. It is while she is disguised as a boy that she first meets the man of the story, Dexter Wright played with humor and sympathy by Glenn Tryon.

This is an ideal picture from every angle, both from the story interest and characterization. There is humor, pathos and romance in this picture of a kind that appeals to all. And above all there is Miss Gaynor, her own winsome, smiling, plucky self, winning the hearts of all who see her.

A cast of players of unusual merit supports Miss Gaynor, including Glenn Tryon, Marie Mosquini, Ben Bard, Joseph Cavithorn, Doris Lloyd and others almost equally well known and popular.

Alfred E. Green directed the picture, which will add new laurels to his fame as a director.

Modern flappers have a sturdy champion in Alberta Vaughn, petite screen star. The flapper of today may wear a carefree, light-hearted, independent manner, and do things her sister of years ago would not dare to do, but underneath her careless guise she has just as great respect for the fundamentals of life as that sister, maintains this indomitable little film actress who plays the feminine lead in "The Romantic Age," the Columbia flapper love drama which comes to the Columbia theater on Sunday and Monday.

"The flapper believes in being happy, and in having a good time."

but she knows that to be serious, too," declares Miss Vaughn. "She knows that when you are cheerful and happy, you get other folks to be happy and carefree with you. She knows that there is enough sorrow and sadness in life without adding to it—and so she plays, dances and sings. But under all her gaiety—she is wary, and she is wise.

"It is the flapper's very independence that makes her admirable," says this universally known screen flapper. "She doesn't wait to have everything decided for her as did her early sister, who remained at home and had her whole life laid out for her by her parents. That arrangement sometimes resulted in the girl's happiness—sometimes it did not. The modern flapper goes after her happiness herself. She knows what she wants—and steers her course to that end."

In "The Romantic Age," Miss Vaughn plays opposite Eugene O'Brien, who portrays the older man, Stanley Taylor as the cadish younger brother, and Bert

AT THE THEATERS

"What Price Glory" Comes To Arcade Theater

Every decade there appears on the theatrical horizon a stage or screen presentation so powerful in its appeal, whether it be comedy or tragedy, that it at once radiates its fame to the remotest corners of the nation. It immediately grasps attention and becomes a byword and the topic of everyday conversation. Everyone will admit that there is no more positive proof of this than "What Price Glory."

As a stage play it was a sensation. Now comes along that most powerful and searching of all agencies that reflect and re-create the motion picture, and the sensation takes on all the widespread and interesting arousing energy of a furor. This is exactly what has happened to William Fox's screen presentation of this celebrated play, which comes to the Arcade theater for a four days' engagement.

The nation's foremost screen critics have been unanimous in their commendation of this motion picture masterpiece, declaring that it surpasses the celebrated play by Laurence Stallings and Maxwell Anderson in every particular despite the greatness of the stage attraction.

It is proclaimed by all those in authority as the greatest motion picture of the year. It is not a war picture. War is its background. It is no more a war play than a love comedy would be called a rural play. Its authors took war as the canvas on which to sketch their story; was as the great influence on men and women that would bring out pathos, comedy and human appeal as no other crisis in the affairs of nations could bring.

Above all else there is comedy. Probably no picture ever made along the edge of a great world tragedy ever had so much comedy. "What Price Glory" on the screen is peopled with real and human characters that will at once win favor. They are not just types. They are the genuine thing in front of the camera, which makes no mistake. "What Price Glory" is not only a great and absorbing picture, with thrills and heart throbs and a world of comedy, but it is crowded with incidents that will bring a chuckle and a thrill long after the moment you see it.
