State Fair Will Show Tomorrow; Exhibits Praised

SALEM, Ore., Oct. 1 (AP)—Oregon's sixty-sixth annual state fair, already proclaimed by thousands of veteran fair fans as the greatest exhibition of the state's agricultural, horticultural and livestock products, will establish another precedent in holding over a seventh day, Sunday.

Comparatively poor attendance due to bad weather during the early part of the week, and prospects of fair weather over the week end led the fair board to extend the event this year to include Sunday at a special meeting late yesterday. All of the exhibitors have agreed to leave their displays intact for the extra day and the only elimination from the regular daily programs will be the horse races. As a feature of the Sunday program a special horse show, to which no admission will be charged, is being arranged for the stadium in the afternoon. Practically all of the winners in the six regular night horse shows will be shown on this program.

The action of the board in extending the fair to cover Sunday is also inspired by a desire to experiment with the advisability of following this practice every year, according to Mrs. Ella S. Wilson, secretary.

"The development of automobile transportation has brought the fair within easy reach of thousands who never could attend before," said Mrs. Wilson. "But many of them cannot get away from their business on week days. We feel that we have a great educational institution in the fair that should be made accessible to all who care to see it, and the attendance tomorrow should indicate quite clearly whether or not it will pay to keep the gates open the extra day."

Ford Gives His Views on How to Attain Success

NEW YORK, Oct. 1, (AP)—Henry Ford tells what he believes success to be and how one should go about attaining it in an interview in the current issue of the magazine Industrial Management.

"Suppose a young man came to you," Fay L. Faurote, the interviewer said, "and asked you for some good advice as to how to succeed, what would you tell him?"

"Now let's see. What is success?" Ford replied. "Success, as I see it is measured by experience. The more of the right kind of experience a man has, the more successful he is.

"That is the way I figure it. You always get something out of every experience. Everything that happens can be made to yield its good results if you are keen enough to see it. That is the way to succeed."

"I'd tell that boy, too, that it pays to think big; it is just as easy to plow 1000 acres as one—with a machine, and that's the way to do it nowadays. Always use a machine whenever the machine will do the job. Nothing is particularly hard if you subdivide it into small jobs. That's the way we do our work, and that is the easy way to do it."
