Christmas Seal Sale Institute Here on Oct. 18

The national and international phases of the campaign to stamp out tuberculosis will be discussed at three regional meetings in Oregon by Frederick D. Hopkins, executive secretary of the National Tuberculosis Association, during the period Oct. 15 to 20. Mr. Hopkins has accepted the invitation of the Oregon Tuberculosis Association to take part in the Christmas Seal Institute to be held in Eugene, Saturday, Oct. 15, in La Grande, Oct. 18 and in Portland, Oct. 20.
These institutes are being arranged by the Lane County Health Association, the Union County Health Association and the Oregon Tuberculosis Association. All county health groups in the southwestern part of the state are taking part in the institute at Eugene; those in Eastern Oregon are to participate in the La Grande meeting; while the Portland institute on Oct. 20 will be attended by delegates from all parts of the state, but chiefly from nearby counties.
All who are interested in public health are invited to the meetings. The institutes are held for the purpose of discussing and correlating the public health programs of the local health associations; and laying plans for the coming sale of Christmas seals, by which all of these activities are supported. Health education, public health nursing, and cooperation between voluntary and official agencies will be the main topics taken up at all three regional institutes.
B. B. BARKER VICE CHIEF OF OREGON U

few. He comes to us in the very prime of his life, and with the one and only motive of devoting the ten best years of his life to some useful public service. After giving the matter many weeks of careful consideration, traveling over the entire state, and interviewing many of our citizens, Mr. Barker reached the conclusion that the development of the University of Oregon afforded the finest possible opportunity for a life of service to his native state.
Specific Duties
Mr. Barker will have very specific duties to perform for the university, and these he desires to have made clear before reconsidering the position. Much of the detail of administration that now falls on President Hall will be taken over by the vice president, thus freeing Dr. Hall for more intensive work in special fields. Mr. Barker who is also the excellent public speaker, will appear on behalf of the university at various times. Due to the fact that university has now expanded to include a large number of students in the medical school in Portland, and in extension centers in various parts of the state, it is felt by the regents that it is impossible for one executive to supervise the entire state during the year without assistance along various lines.
The gift campaign will also be under the direction of Mr. Barker, and as soon as organization plans are completed, work on this will go ahead with vigor. The Alumni Holding Company, which is directly interested in the gift campaign is making arrangements to reimburse the regents for the fund expended for Mr. Barker's salary, thus relieving the taxpayers of the state of this burden, it is explained.
The vice president has always taken a keen interest in his fellowmen, and particularly in work involving young men and women. While in Chicago he was a leader

Champion of Young Men

Mr. Barker also has been the champion of young men just admitted to law practice, gaining their admission to bar associations and other helpful organizations. He has also financed the education of a large number of students.
As one of the most tireless workers of the Chicago University alumni association, Mr. Barker has gained a real insight into educational problems of universities. This is expected to stand him in good stead for his new position.
Mr. Barker's mother, who was a daughter of Elias Brown, came across the plains with her parents in 1847. Her father was buried by the roadside en route, but her mother, with true pioneer spirit, came on to Salem, where her father, Thomas Cox, opened the first store in that city. J. Henry Brown, author of "Brown's Political History of Oregon," was one of these children.
William C. Barker, father of the vice president, came across the plains in 1827. After his marriage, he came on to Salem, where his father, Thomas Cox, opened the first store in that city. J. Henry Brown, author of "Brown's Political History of Oregon," was one of these children.
Mr. Barker graduated from the Salem public schools in 1883, and at that time earned his money for his books and clothing by working in the garden of Ike Patterson, who is now governor of the state. He spent the next four years at Willamette university, where he was prominent as an orator at that time, and was also active in college journalism.
From Willamette university Mr. Barker went to the University of Chicago, where he studied law. He graduated from here in 1897, after having been a member of the first winning debate team ever produced by the institution.
Mr. Barker next attended the law school of Harvard university, working his way through as he had at Willamette and Chicago, and three years later was granted a degree of LL. B.
Mr. and Mrs. Barker were married in Chicago June 15, 1904, and have one daughter, Barbara, who was born May 7, 1909. Mrs. Barker and Miss Barker will come to Oregon with Mr. Barker early in the spring, to make their home here.

PRESBYTERIAN CLUB MEMBERS HEAR ADDRESS

The first meeting of this year of the Presbyterian Men's club was held last evening at the church with Harley Stoneking as host. The Rev. J. George Waiz, pastor of the church, was the speaker and he talked about Presbyterian men's clubs, telling what other clubs in the country are doing.
Mr. Stoneking presided over the business session in the absence of the president, Gustav Wissler, and C. M. Humphreys was elected as vice president to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of A. V. Lindgren.
Norman Fries, J. E. Ravenscroft and A. E. McEachran were appointed members of the program committee, and H. R. Hanna and A. E. McEachran were appointed to act with Harley Stoneking as a membership committee.
The time for the regular meeting was changed from once each this morning, stressed the need of character development in teaching, declaring that this phase of the education could not be over-emphasized and that it should begin in the primary department and should be carried on throughout the entire educational course. "Character and training, after all, is the real end of education," said the speaker.

Stress was also laid upon character development yesterday afternoon by C. A. Howard, state superintendent, when he addressed the teachers at the assembly meeting. "The health of our children should not be neglected," he said, adding, "I am heartily in favor of all possible attention to the health of the child." Superintendent Howard also spoke in morning classes yesterday. He left La Grande last night.
