GOD'S FAVORITES: He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty. Psalm 91.

It's all right for newspapers to print daily lists of information questions, but it's hardly fair to head 'em, "What Do You Know?"

The new "Miss America," after her crowning at Atlantic City, decides—oh, so unwillingly!—to go upon the stage. It is announced that neither the girl nor her parents want to exploit her beauty publicly, but "for patriotic reasons" she "will engage in movie and stage work and permit the nation to see her in the bathing tights in which she won her title." She will appear in public, her mother says, "because she possesses the title, and because she must do honor to it, and fulfill her duty to the country at large." Prize beauties, as the record shows, are actuated by nothing if not patriotism and a lofty sense of duty in the matter of displaying their charms.

INCONSISTENCIES OF THE LAW

The killing of deer in Oregon is authorized by law during a specified season. They are reasonably plentiful, much more plentiful than they were a generation ago, according to veteran hunters. The killing of elk is prohibited by law, whether accidental or intentional, because elk are scarce and the state seeks to protect them. So strict is the law that an offender may be fined $1000 and thrown into jail if convicted. That happened in this county. The young man who plead guilty to the charge, so we understand, said that he mistook the elk for a deer, that he killed it thinking it was a deer, that it was therefore an accidental killing. It cost him $1000 and a jail sentence for making the mistake, one that might very easily be made by probably a majority of deer hunters regardless of how law-abiding and sportsmanlike they might try to be.

The victim in this particular case is further quoted as saying that killing an elk cost him a thousand dollars, that if he had in the same way accidentally killed another hunter it would have cost nothing. A very true statement and one to ponder over. Hunters are frequently mistaken for deer and are killed by their companions—accidentally. If some hunters cannot distinguish between a deer and a man, what chance has the average hunter in distinguishing between a deer and an elk? If one is a crime, why isn't the other, when the loss to society is far greater? What right have we to say that the killing of a man is a hunting accident and the killing of an elk is a crime?

A fine of $1000, which the law allows, is a heavy penalty. In ordinary circumstances it means more than the offender can possibly have or hope to borrow. If he can't pay it, he works it out at $2 a day in jail—and the fine becomes a jail sentence of more than a year and a half. A year and a half in jail for killing an elk, with the very great probability that the killing was accidental and unintentional.

There are many reasons, we imagine, why elk should be protected against extermination. There are an equal number of reasons why violations should be guarded against and offenders punished. We doubt, however, the good sense of a law that provides so heavy a penalty. If it is justified, especially in accidental cases, then a charge of manslaughter should be possible against the hunter who shoots and kills his human companion. We may be paying too much attention to the preservation of game, too little to the insuring of justice and the preservation of human life.

MEX REBELLION FLARES UP AGAIN

Battle Near Guadalajara Costs 68 Lives—Federal Troops Win

NOGALES, ARIZ., Oct. 14. (AP)—Rebellion, which the Mexican government had declared stamped out by the recent defeat of the forces of General Escobedo Gomez, today had taken a new toll of death and destruction as the result of an outbreak in the vicinity of Guadalajara, Jalisco, headquarters of the Southern Pacific of Mexico.

Semi-official dispatches received here tell of a day of fierce fighting yesterday by rebels under the command of General Leon Sanchez and Antonio Degollado and federal troops under Francisco Flores. The rebels, with the advantage in numbers, won the first encounter but at a cost of 50 dead, while the federalists lost 18. The insurgents were routed in the second and more decisive engagement.

NOGALES, ARIZ., Oct. 14. (AP)—Unconfirmed news from the Nogales Herald state that Colonel Mateo Flores, former chief of the garrison at Guaymas, Sonora, Mexico, and well known along the west coast of Mexico, has been executed by a firing squad at Tepic, state of Nayarit, for complicity in the recent rebellion.

Advisers from Mexico City say that the government has ordered the confiscation of the $1,000,000 estate of General Hector Almadro, aid of the fugitive presidential candidate and revolutionist Arnolfo Gomez.

MORE GOSSIPING JONNESSES

LAWRENCE, KAN. (AP)—May be it's because their name is Jones, that Brothers Chester and Penfield of Lawrence play golf so well.

In a three-state invitation tournament at Topeka, Kan., Chester, the younger of the Jones boys, won the junior championship, while Penfield was runner-up for the senior title.

The brothers are students at the University of Kansas here, where their father is a physician.
