MENUS

By Sister Mary
BREAKFAST—Concord grapes, cream, creamed dried beef on croutons, broiled tomatoes, crisp toast, milk, coffee.
LUNCHEON—Hidden oysters, cream with French dressing, graham bread, apple snow, milk, tea.
DINNER—Ham baked in milk, steamed rice, buttered cauliflower, beet and celery salad, pumpkin pie, milk, coffee.

Sweet cider might be served to excellent advantage with the pumpkin pie for the dinner dessert. The whole dinner calls for cider and will be more keenly enjoyed by the addition of this delightful homely beverage.

Hidden Oysters
Four or five medium sized potatoes, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon pepper, 2 eggs, 8 or 12 oysters, 1 onion, Parsnips, and boil until done. Drain and mash. There should be about 2 cups. Beat in butter, salt and pepper and while hot, add eggs, well beaten. Spread on a buttered platter which is oven proof, using half the potatoes and making a sheet about one-half inch thick. Put oysters dry before oven to bake. Arrange in a single layer over the potatoes, sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper, dot with butter, and put one or two drops of lemon juice on each oyster. Cover with remaining potatoes and bake in a moderate oven until the potatoes are brown on top. Serve on the platter on which they were baked.

HENRY IS IRISH

NEW YORK—Quite a few Poles seem convinced that Henry Ford is one of them. Copies of the Ford-owsker Leben, a daily newspaper published in a small town in Eastern Poland, received here, quote three farmers named Kurt as saying that Henry is their young brother. Ford was born near Greenfield, Mich., and is of Irish descent.

PASTES THUMB BACK ON NEW YORK

One of Joseph J. Rockwell's thumbs is a little numb but otherwise it is nearly as good as it was a month ago when, he says, he cut it off with a hatchet while laying laths. He stuck it back on with adhesive plaster.

Senator Shipstead, attacked by bears in the mountains, turned a camera on them. The bears fled, probably fearing their pictures would appear in the Congressional Record.

PERENNIAL SEED FOR FALL SOWING
It is much better to sow seeds of perennial plants this fall than next spring. They will germinate earlier and will have a correspondingly longer growing season next year. Then, too, the weathering of winter speeds up germination in many of them which, sown in the spring, are slow to appear. In fact, some of them will be over a year in the ground before appearing if they do not have the weathering. The grasses, the gas plant, Dianthus fraxinella, and delphiniums, sometimes show these traits. The Trollius never will germinate the first year if sown in the spring.

Sow delphiniums, columbine, galliardias, foxgloves, Canterbury bells, peach-leaved bellflowers, coreopsis—in fact any of the hardy perennials—late this fall and save that much spring work and get better results in the way of germination. Primrose seed gives much higher percentage of germination if sown in the fall than in the following spring.

Sow the seed in rows where it may grow along until the plants are of sufficient size to transplant. The one danger of fall planting is the wash from heavy rains, a danger always in planting seeds in the open. To obviate this danger, mulch the beds with some material that will not mat down solidly, such as oak leaves, pine needles, or fresh straw. In the spring the beds may be protected by frames covered with window screen, which breaks the force of driving rains and prevents the tiny seedlings from being washed out of existence. This scheme is used quite widely by professional gardeners to protect their seedlings, a large proportion of which might be lost if fully exposed to spring down-pours.

Those who grow irises from seed, a popular garden pastime of recent years, should plant the seed an inch deep this fall. Siberian, Japanese, and the tall bearded sorts. This will give good germination next spring, which will not result with as much certainty from spring-sown seed, some of which will take a year before appearing.

Perennial aster seed sown this fall will give blooming plants next fall. The perennial seed-bed should be made now, spading in a good supply of fertilizer and sowing it upon the surface of the bed

BOISTEROUS WEDDING GUEST
BECKENHAM, Eng.—Melodrama of the triangular variety was enacted at the marriage of Miss Kathleen Mary Croft in St. Paul's church. Arriving before the bride party, the spare lover ran up and down the aisles to the great embarrassment of the ushers. He was taken in charge, but when the bride entered, the still unresigned admirer broke from his captors and danced about Miss Croft in ecstasy.
