earn at least their expenses as they fly.

"This situation results in inexperienced pilots carrying passengers for hire, often under adverse conditions, in flights which really should be under supervision as part of their training. Even if an accident is averted during the first hundred or two hundred hours, the pilot still lacks much of the knowledge and technique of the art of flying which should have been learned during the training period.

Few Accidents.
"We have surprisingly few accidents on our air lines and with our experienced operators but we read only too often of crashes which upon investigation are found in almost every instance to have resulted from inexperience and lack of judgment on the part of the pilot.

"Apparently the only method of combating the existing situation is first through regulation of flying schools and second through regulation of the qualifications required of a pilot engaging in commercial flying and especially in passenger carrying.

"The department of commerce through the bureau of aeronautics is regulating interstate flying very successfully, but it has no control over flying activities within individual states, and, of course, the student pilot confines himself to the borders of his own state during his most dangerous period.

"During the two and a half decades of its existence aviation has progressed toward ever increasing safety.

Next Advance.
"The next advance will come through regulation of air activities including certain minimum requirements of flying school courses, but before extensive regulation can become effective the department of commerce must be given the right to regulate all flying activities instead of interstate traffic only.

"Either through federal or individual state action we are in need of uniform flying regulations throughout the Union.

"A number of states have adopted the department of commerce regulations but the majority have either no regulation whatsoever or have enacted special rules which will in the end only serve to retard aeronautical development. I say this in the interest of the safety of the men who want to be pilots and of those of our people who want to fly."

or back, crisscrossed, or be totally absent.

Ensembles Popular.
Ensemble ideas the sports and travel mode, there being two, three and four piece ensembles, and belts are important with a variety to choose from. There are narrow-belted wide ones, buckled, tied, stitched, made of leather, tweed, homespun and other woolsens, grosgrain ribbon and crepe de chine. Skirts obtain fullness by large soft pleats, rather than the narrow all-around ones, and there is a new added length to the skirts. Circular godets and groups of pleats balancing plain spaces are good also.

In the sports coats mixtures are being used mostly in the place of the larger plaids. Both sports and dress coats are fur trimmed. Large buttons are popular.

Courtroom Crowded.
The room was jammed and the corridors were packed. Outside a large group had gathered—standing in the snow—waiting for an opportunity to enter the court.

On a cross-examination Miss Trickey was asked why she had told conflicting stories of the stabbing.

"I loved him so much," she said. "I didn't want anyone to know I did it."

In answer to another question asked by the prosecutor, demanding if she did not know that she would be acquitted if the killing was in self-defense, the girl answered:

Defense Score Point.
The defense scored a point with the calling to the stand of Charles Snelling.

"Did you see Miss Trickey using a knife to make a bride?" the witness was asked. "I did. I asked

MAGRUDER CHEERS FOR THE NAVY

Right in the center of cheering for the Navy when its football team met and defeated Penn at Philadelphia was Rear Admiral Thomas P. Magruder, the department's severest critic. You see him here between two of the midshipmen's cheer leaders.

shawl colors of fur are a new feature of the dress coats. Front flares are also new, the back being straight. Many of the sports coats are belted. Wolfe and fox are the most popular of the fur used. The dress coats are fashioned of suede cloth, velvet, lustrous and other soft materials.

Latest in Hats.
Velvet is also appearing in hats for the mid-winter season, and in more instances than one is found combined with metal cloth. Satins and metallic cloth are also popular. Helmet shapes lead in the style of hats. Practically all of the newer things are close-fitting off-the-face models, with the exception of a number of other styles for those who cannot wear the smaller hats. Hats of the French tam effect are good, and a new and clever creation is the new veil which will in the end only serve to retard aeronautical development. I say this in the interest of the safety of the men who want to be pilots and of those of our people who want to fly."

Accessories and Jewelry.
Accessories and jewelry are important and are to be had to harmonize with any costume. No longer is the same piece of jewelry appropriate for every costume, but instead is selected to be worn with a certain outfit.

Bugs often match the shoes and in many instances the gloves and bag are made to match. Mode and color are new shades in both gloves and bags. Combinations, as shown in gowns and hats, are also good in bags. The tendency is for the flat underarm bag, except for evening when a beaded mesh bag is carried.

Shoe Styles.
The way in which costumes now vary according to the hour and the occasion also effects the style of shoes and the materials used. Without question suede is to be a leading material during the winter.
