FURTHER PROOF NOT NEEDED
It seems an Oklahoma girl advertised for a husband, and found one within a very short time. The advertisement cost $2.00 and the wedding $3.00. In less than a year the husband died and left his widow $11,000 insurance. Yes sir, it pays to advertise!

Thanksgiving makes the turkey mad. Lots of them even lose their heads over it.

We often wonder what a fellow would do if, after walking a mile, he found himself out of matches. (He would probably go to the "see-and-mile.")

Maybe they call a sailing vessel "she" because they make their best showing in the wind.

After all these seems to be more sense in the pursuit of happiness than in sitting around waiting for joy to come around and kiss you.

on sand taken from the Columbia and the audit is to determine what should be paid the state covering the past years. Royalty will be paid from now on. The sand and gravel companies claimed they had taken the sand mainly from the Washington side of the river. No royalty was exacted by that state, until recently.

Those are mate love and mother love. She is seen as a woman who has left the luxurious, sheltered life of London society to become the wife of the commandant of an isolated outpost in British India. After three years of desert existence and association with brutalized men she welcomes a young soldier fresh from home.

Her husband is unreasonably jealous, and in the process of "making a soldier" of the lad almost kills him, so when her husband has taken the garrison out on one of his raids on hostile natives she persuades him to leave, and he persuades her to accompany him. The love which has awakened between the two comes to a climax in the desert when a storm, forcing them to halt, gives her time to think.

Then it is that the mother in her rises to dispute her right to hazard his career and happiness to gratify her infatuation and save her from the desert. She is older than he, old enough to love him as a mother—youth enough to love him as a sweetheart.

In the outcome of that terrible soul struggle lies their destiny. William Russell, William Collier, Jr., John Miljan, Douglas Gerrard, and Jack Ackroyd are included in the excellent supporting cast. "The Desired Woman" comes to the Arcade theater Friday for a run of two days.

An audience of more than 250 assembled at the First Presbyterian church in Oregon City last week and celebrated a memorable event in the history of that church, the complete cancellation of every financial obligation against that organization.

Thousands now use genuine Agmel from Mexico, where formerly only a few wealthy sufferers could travel to Mexico to drink it. This world-famous natural sap, cherished centuries for its health value, is now available here in uncooked concentrated form known as Agmel. Not a medicine but Agmel! Just as Nature produces it except for removal of water without cooking. Free from preservatives. Non-alcoholic. People all over the world now use Agmel in connection with treatment of kidney trouble. Scientific research now being conducted to determine why Agmel acts as it does points to its distinctive sweet. Agmel, as an easily assimilated carbohydrate with characteristics of the complete sugars, and somewhat similar to glycogen found in normal liver and muscle tissue. This research also discloses nine valuable minerals, vitamins A, B and C, and an active yeast peculiar to Agmel.

Many physicians, particularly those familiar with Agmel, endorse Agmel. Every sufferer should investigate it. Free booklet at drugists. Imported by Agmel Corp.

AT THE THEATERS

Tarzan Coming To Colonial Friday, Saturday

Richard Dix Scores in "Shanghai Bound"

A unique picture of rare charm and distinction has been made from the story, "Tarzan and the Golden Lion," from the pen of the famous author, Edgar Rice Burroughs. Coming to the Colonial theater Friday and Saturday.

The production is an ERO Gold Hand Special. The story is a fantasy, set in the heart of Africa, and has as its principal character, Tarzan, the white man who lived in the "Unknown Land" and had for his friends the savages and animals who were the only inhabitants of this strange world.

The picture is a delight inasmuch as it is refreshingly different and deals with the most fascinating of all subjects, a hunt for treasure in a hidden city. Tarzan, who is Lord Greystoke, is accompanied by his wife, the beautiful Lady Greystoke. When their niece, Ruth Porter, meet Burton Bradshaw, the overseer of Tarzan's plantation, the spark of love is set aflame and a charming romance follows. It is only after many thrilling adventures in search of the hidden city and the unusual climax which follows, that everything ends in a most satisfactory fashion. The adaptation and continuity were written by William E. Wing. The cast includes James Hovey, Fred Porter, Edna Murphy, Harold Goodwin, Liu Yu-ching, Dorothy Dunbar, Darcy Corrigan, Boris Karloff and Robert Holder. J. P. McGowan is the director.

That motion picture producers know no geographical barriers is being proven on the screen of the Star theater today and Friday. There, local citizens can see Richard Dix in a thrilling, exciting, vividly colorful film "Shanghai Bound."

The locale is China, and the Yangtze River, where the action takes place, is realistic enough to please the most capricious critic.

Dix has a great vehicle in "Shanghai Bound." This ace of Paramount stars has increased his popularity immensely recently with such splendid pictures as "The Quarterback," "Knockout Kelly" and "Main Power" but in "Shanghai Bound" he even betters them. The unusual background, stirring action and timeliness of theme are sufficient reasons why this is a picture not to be missed.

It is ideal material for two-faced Dix and he gives a great performance.

Supporting him in an excellent cast, headed by Mary Brian, who has played in several of his recent pictures. As the naughty American society girl who finally succumbs to her love for the ship captain, she has probably the best role of her career. Other members of the cast are good and an interesting feature is the fact that more than 150 Chinese appear in the production.

Luther Reed has directed this picture with meticulous attention to detail and he has contrived to present what seems to be a wholly authentic picture of modern China. The story is by Edward S. (Tex) O'Reilly, erstwhile drillmaster in the Chinese Imperial Army. It's evident that he knows China.

Cooking makes digestion easier. It is in reality a process that corresponds to an early stage of digestion. It saves the salivary glands, the stomach, and the intestinal tract a great deal of labor. In fact, without it as a preliminary treatment, many foods would not be taken up by the body. As a result of cooking, chemical changes occur which may reduce the food constituents into simpler chemical substances which are very readily attacked by the digestive juices.

Through an improvement in the taste and aroma of the foods, cooking stimulates the appetite. This improvement of the appetite results in salivary, stomach, and intestinal activity. The saliva first acts upon the starches and other carbohydrate foods. After the food has reached the stomach, the juices there, consisting of weak hydrochloric acid and the ferments pepsin and rennin, continue to act upon the food. The foods particularly affected in the stomach proper are the meats and the protein elements of milk and other substances. Later the intestinal juices and secretions from the pancreas and liver complete the act of digestion. These juices also contain ferments which give a final touch to the digestion of the different types of food.

When these organs function properly, the secretions are given forth in sufficient quantity and quality. The food passes along in normal time and is taken up by the body in proper fashion.

The process of digestion is to a great extent influenced by the mind and many other factors such as cooking, the type of food eaten, and other conditions peculiar to the individual.
