HEALTH

AIRPLANES TEACH HEALTH LESSON

By Lester A. Royal, M. D., West Liberty, Iowa. Member Gorgas Memorial. As soon as a mail plane lands skilled mechanics carefully inspect all parts to make sure that every thing is all right before the machine continues on its journey.

Why shouldn't we human beings have our bodies given such a going over at least once a year? At the rate we are traveling, our machines need careful watching.

It would be easier for the family doctor and cheaper for the patient if once each year he were to go to the doctor and say, "I want this machine gone over," and insist that it be done carefully.

The American people, like the airplanes, are under a great strain. They must have care. The very best of high test gasoline and oil are used in the airplanes so they may be more efficient and longer lived.

As part of its work in preventive medicine, the Gorgas Memorial urges the American people to care for the human machine by having it examined at least once a year. By eating proper food and taking the right kind and amount of exercise and rest, our machines will be able to carry on their work, like the mail planes, with the greatest efficiency.
