AT THE THEATERS

Lillian Gish In Vivid Role In "Annie Laurie"

Lillian Gish is playing a new Lillian Gish—and the secret is an odd one.

The pensive and wistful heroine of "Annie Laurie," "The Scarlet Letter" and other plays in which her fragile beauty appeals to the sympathies of an audience, is rather a gorgeous creature in her newest role in "Annie Laurie."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's drama of the Scottish Highlands, playing at the Arcade theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

She breathes the air of aristocracy in the rows of a Scottish woman of title, and her entire aspect seems to have taken on a subtle change.

The secret is—her hair.

Done up with a ribbon and curled into long ringlets after the fashion of aristocratic women of Scotland, it gives her a patrician appearance that is imposing—but her wistful charm penetrates through it in the vivid story.

It took several hours each day to arrange the curls she wore and several hairdressers worked on the new disguise.

Miss Gish heads a notable cast, with Norman Kerry in the leading male role, Hobart Bosworth, Russell Simpson, Crichton Hale, Brandon Hurst, David Torrence, Patricia Avery, Joseph Striker, Frank Currier and others. John S. Robertson directed the story from the scenario by Josephine Lovell.

Picture At Colonial Has Great Cast

"The Cruise of the Hellion", showing for the last time today at the Colonial theatre, is given much praise by those who have seen it and a great deal of the credit for the success of the film goes to the aggregation of talented artists who assist in the unfolding of the story.

A truly representative group of cinema celebrities were assembled for the enacting of this lustrous picture. Heading the list is Tom Santschi in the role of the brutal captain of an ill-starred bark, Santschi—remembered as the other half of the fight in "The Spoilers" which established William Farnum as one of the screen's greatest actors—does a magnificent piece of work. So, too, does lovely Edna Murphy who, in one big picture after another—witness "MacFadden's Flirt," "Girls of Today" and "The Silent Hero"—is demonstrating her right to be known, not only as one of the loveliest girls before the camera, but one of the most talented, as well.

Donald Keith—who was in "The Whirlwind of Youth" and several other Paramount pictures—makes

"No Man's Law" Showing At Star Tonight

"No Man's Law," a story covering but twenty-four hours in its action and presenting only four human and four animal players, is the novel feature showing at the Star theatre tonight for the last time.

It is Hal Rosch's fourth Pathé feature starring Rex, king of wild horses, and Barbara Kent, James Finlayson, Oliver Hardy and Theodore Von Eltz give really excellent performances. Lady, the white mare seen previously with Rex, and two comic burros complete the cast.

F. Richard Jones, supervisor and author, should come in for a big share of the plaudits for his unusual, concentrated and dramatic plot in "No Man's Law." It is a story without a regular hero, Von Eltz playing the role of a

A pleasing juvenile, Sheldon Lewis, a tried and true trouper, is splendid. And so on all down the line. Even the comedy relief, in Martin Turner's able hands, is sure-fire.

A town in Oklahoma has no chief of police, no town marshal and no crime record. A good place to send our leading deplorables for a rest.

Twenty-four students have been graduated from the Dry Bureau's College for Enforcement Officers in Washington. The dispatch didn't mention the names of the honor men in the target practice course.
