

STARS SHINE IN EAST-WEST GAME

Some of Best Football Players in Country to Play in Frisco

By F. G. Vosburgh (Associated Press Sports Writer) NEW YORK (AP)—Two football teams that together are literally "All-American" with players representing every section from the southern tip of California to New England are mobilizing for battle at San Francisco the day after Christmas.

One of these bands of erstwhile college stars will be defending the football prestige of the East, and the other the West. As allies the East will have the pick of the Missouri Valley and Middle Western sections while the Southwest region, where they grew their football players hard as coals, joins hands with the Pacific Coast. Proceeds go to charity.

From the expansive Eastern football realm, Coach Andy Kerer of Washington & Jefferson, generalissimo of the sunrise troops, has gathered an array that looks like this: Backs—Bruce Caldwell, Yale's great fullback; Pressell and Howell of Nebraska; Lane of Dartmouth, the East's high scorer; Art Ames of W. J. and Jack Connor of N. Y. U.

Ends—Fishwick, Yale, and Cole, Dartmouth.

Guards—Haer, Michigan, and Hauly, W. J.

Tackles—Hindels, Nebraska, and Douns, W. J.

Centers—J. H. Gray, Georgetown, or Reisch, Illinois.

Eleven men of about equal caliber will oppose them with their backs up against the sunset and the Pacific ocean. The prospective team is headed by the great "Devil May" Kaer, All-American back last year at the University of Southern California.

An All-Western conference does not permit a man to play in an all-star game unless he graduates the next year, the eleven from the West is possibly a bit older and more seasoned than its opponent. Neither team ever has played as a unit before.

Headliner of the squad rounded up by Coach Orin E. Hollibaugh of Washington State, the western commander-in-chief, includes:

Backs—Wilson, Washington; Kutch, Iowa; Cassanova, Santa Clara; Hunt, Texas A&M; Gilmore, Army service team; Mosher, Washington State; Mann, Southern Methodist (Texas).

Ends—Behrard, Southern California; Matthews, Texas Christian university; Sikes, Texas A. and M.; Carlet, St. Mary's College.

Tackles—Hicks, St. Mary's; Brewster, University of Texas.

Guards—Diehl, Idaho; Wright, Washington.

Center—Carruthers, St. Ignace.

The only major section without a favorite son in one or the other of these lists is the Southern Conference, which may have a private battle with a Pacific Coast eleven at about the same time. Freddie Eckhard, Alabama tackle and Billy Speers, All-American Vanderbilt quarterback, have been named as members of the proposed team of seniors is formed for the invasion.

This ad is a continuation of yesterday's ad. Lino glass is still our subject. Lino glass is flexible; it filters sunlight and lets the violet rays come in. Now you look up your dictionary and find out the meaning of violet rays. But if you want a plain explanation in just common country language, violet rays is the heating part of the sun's rays. If an old hen feels dumpy, if she has a cold in her head and also another cold in her throat, if she breathes with a cough, sometimes she sounds like a coffee grinder and other times she sounds like the hissing of a snake, that old hen is trying to make you understand that she wants you to buy some Lino glass. The Lino glass is three yards for $1. Three yards will give enough light for several hens. I can say this, that the Lino glass is going out.
