Kidwell Sticks To His Story Of Wrong Affidavit

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 (AP)— Under grilling cross examination, Edward J. Kidwell steadfastly reiterated today that Assistant District Attorney James O'Leary had made him swear to an affidavit containing untruths and designed for use in the Sinclair-Burns contempt case.
Kidwell, a juror in the case of Harry P. Sinclair, and Albert B. Fall, growing out of the Teapot Dome naval oil lease, has hopped in and out of the contempt proceedings since that trial was abruptly ended and charges were made that Burns detectives had shadowed the jury for Sinclair. He made his charges against O'Leary yesterday and today he repeated them.

Ted Roy To Sing In Eastern Oregon

CORVALLIS, Ore., Dec. 21 (AP)— Ted A. Roy, "singing blacksmith" of Pilot Rock, will appear in an operetta staged by Glee and Madrigal clubs of Oregon State Agricultural college in leading towns of Eastern Oregon spring vacation according to a telegram just received from Paul Petri, director of music here, who accompanied Roy east. Roy had been cast in the part before entering the radio contest in which he took second prize, but friends here feared his success might interfere with the plans. It is now thought he will finish out his third year in music here as planned, while carrying a radio contract on Pacific coast, meanwhile deferring the conservatory scholarship he won till next year.

Stanford Making Ready For Pitt

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Dec. 21 (AP)— With the bugaboo of final examinations left safely behind them, the members of the Stanford university football squad has returned to the practice grid preparatory to facing Pittsburg university's Panthers at Pasadena on Jan. 2.
Indications are that Stanford will seek victory against the Smokey City boys over the same route as they were successfully before this year's air, a well developed overland game with a few new plays and several old ones revamped appears to be Coach Warner's plan of battle for the Panthers.

Prune Suit Case Doomed Is Belief

FREEWATER, Ore., Dec. 21 (AP)— The "suit case package" used for shipping fresh prunes, appears to be doomed. A committee of growers, meeting in an agricultural economics conference here, has gone on record in favor of a change to a package containing four tin-top baskets, with the fruit graded and sized.
A federal grade for prunes also is asked in a resolution to the United States department of agriculture.

Police Fail To Capture Girl Slayer

Officers descended upon the apartment house Sunday.
Makes Getaway
According to the landlady, Mrs. Ethel Broderick, soon after the raid Hickman stroled by her in a hallway, dropped a casual remark and left the building. He did not return. But the officers, having identified Hickman as the hunted "fox," returned to his apartment yesterday.
They found the very necktie which Hickman had worn while his picture was taken for police identification last summer at the time of his arrest on forgery charges. It was that arrest which resulted in his discharge from the bank of which Parker is an officer and which is believed to have provided the vengeance motive which drove Hickman to the fiendish crime of which he is accused.
On this second, more minute search the officers found stains which they ordered analyzed to determine whether they might have been caused by the slaying of the Marlan in that apartment. They also found a shirt bearing the initials H. E. G. The name H. E. G. Gerber had been found linked in the neckband of a piece of a shirt used to tie the bundle that was a part of the slain school girl's body.
Articles found there had come from Kansas City, the former home of Hickman. A crudely made hair of mittens was discovered. They were made of black oilcloth and the thread with which they had been stitched was used by the officers to be the same as that with which little Mackin's eyelids had been sutured. The mittens, according to the officers, might have been used to prevent the small victim from making any resistance.
The other side of the dual character presented by the police investigations was presented by the boy's Sunday school teacher and the woman at whose boarding house he lived for some time.
"The Hickman boy was a gentleman," said Percy Deek, his Sunday school teacher. "He had occasional fits of melancholy though."
"He was such a neat, quiet, orderly boy," declared Mrs. C. M. Driskell, the manager of the boarding house in Alhambra, a suburb, where Hickman lived for four months.

Suspect Nearly Mobbbed by Crowd

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 21 (AP)— Miss Dick Powell, who resembles William E. Hickman, accused killer of Marlan Parker, was arrested at Sixth and Hill streets at noon today, a crowd attempted to storm the corner and a riot call was flashed to central station.
Powell was released after brief questioning. Officers said he bore a striking resemblance to Hickman, but was much taller than the hunted man.

S-4 WRECK IS LOST; STORM TEARS LINE

throughout the night no answer came from below. Just before 10 o'clock this morning the S-4 pulled up anchor and left from the spot where she had been endeavoring to communicate with the S-4. The Falcon came and took anchorage and the S-4 was waggled for permission to charge her batteries. This was given her the Falcon.
The S-4 had been under orders to remain in position as long as there was any hope of communicating with her sister ship. Her action in moving away was interpreted as meaning that there was no longer possibility that life remained on board the S-4 and that no more signals might be looked for.

LINDBERGH GUEST

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 21 (AP)— Charles A. Lindbergh, who has seen much of the beauty of Mexico from the air, today had the opportunity of seeing some of the wonders of Mexico that lie under ground.
General Obregon invited him to lunch in an underground cave near San Juan Teotihuacan after viewing one of the greatest archaeological monuments in Mexico—the ancient Aztec pyramids of the sun and moon.
A Chicago couple has been divorced after 56 years of married life. Well, they did give it a trial, anyway.

fully groomed, extremely polite, used good grammar and otherwise was a model boy."
That's the youth—if the police are right, a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde come to life with a vengeance far outstripping the fiction character—that is the object of what is declared to be the greatest man hunt in the history of southern California.

Jakowsky Freed

Milton Jakowsky who had been arrested as a suspect in the case was released last night.
Police detectives said that only Jakowsky's morbid curiosity had given him any connection with the case. His arrest was caused by the report of neighbors of the Parkers that Jakowsky, a friend of the informants, had spent much of his time since the kidnaping of the child, peering at the Parker house from behind the neighbor's windows. Suspicion that he might be involved in the case was based on the belief that the kidnaper had kept a close check on the activities in the Parker home.
Further substantiation of one of the early theories advanced by the police investigating the Marlan Parker murder was disclosed early today when officers said two persons, whose names they refused to reveal, had seen William Edward Hickman and another man carry several bundles from the Bellevue Arms apartments and put them into a Chrysler coupe.

Strengthens Theory

The information of the two persons, a man and his wife, who knew Hickman as Donald Evans, strengthened the theory that Hickman had aid in the plot of which he is accused.
The couple who saw Hickman and the other man, live at the Bellevue Arms apartments, where Hickman is said by police to have carried out his diabolical kidnaping and slaying plot. They were returning to their rooms at about 6 o'clock Saturday evening—two hours before a masked man, riding in a Chrysler automobile brought back the torn and lifeless body of little Marlan and sold it to her distracted father for $1500 when the woman remarked to her husband: "Why, that's young Donald Evans, isn't it?"
Her husband answered in the affirmative and the wife amusedly remarked that it seemed that Hickman and his friend were going on a party as they were carrying several packages described as heavily wrapped and about the "length of a wine bottle."
They also were carrying a suitcase.

Believes in Santa

Pretty little Francis Clark voices a warning to all little boys and girls who don't believe in Santa Claus: "Last year my little cousin said he didn't believe in Santa Claus and so when Santa Claus came, why Santa Claus told him not to say that any more or he wouldn't come again," she admonishes. She is a second grader and, told this to her young classmates who seriously agreed with her that they believed in Santa.

Janitor's Story

The unidentified companion of Hickman held open the door of the automobile while Hickman placed the bundles inside. No more was seen by the man and his wife as they thought nothing of the matter and continued on into the apartment.
After hearing the story of the couple, Chief of Detectives Herman Cline immediately ordered officers to continue their investigations on the theory that Hickman was aided by at least one other person in his revolting crime.
Last night a janitor in the apartment house told the officers of having seen Hickman, then known as Evans, carrying bundles on Friday night. Although this first was interpreted to mean that the child might have been killed the day previous to the collection of the ransom, the finding of the other witness caused police to attach less importance to the janitor's story.

boy's boots. Little Roy Komach, a first-grader at Riveria, wants a real American toy train and says so with the dignity of his race.
Edward Macklin, a bright-eyed little second-grader, is just one of the many who declare that they have ordered a "keen new sled—boy!" from Santa.

Dainty little Miss Patricia Longfellow, in the second grade, says: "I want Santa Claus to bring me a baby doll, and I wrote to him, too."
David Kurtz may have had "a little matter to settle when he told the reporter the other day that "he wanted a pair of boxing gloves." He is also a first-grader, and goes to school to Mrs. Neill at Riveria.

Bernard Cleveland, six years old, wasn't reticent about telling that he wanted a pair of slippers and a bathrobe.
Dorothy Henning, Irma Gokeler, Jean Davison and Mary Jane Hessler were among the many little girls who want dolls.
"I want a fire truck and write it down so Santa Claus can read it," said Junior Ashby, with the wisdom of a five-year-old and with a Kansas City accent.
Philip Stanfield, who is a first grader, is interested right now in "getting our Christmas tree decorated for my brothers and sisters." He is another one who handles a long word with more skill than many adults.
