HEALTH

FOOD HYGIENICITIES

By E. B. BARNETT, M. D., Pittsburg, Pa.

Member Georgia Memorial

There are some fortunate persons who pick themselves upon the fact that they can eat anything and that everything agrees with them. Others have found through unpleasant experiences that they not only have an actual distaste for certain articles of food, but that some food actually injures them. The latter class has been looked upon as somewhat queer and notional, with little more imagination than real children, especially have been the sufferers from this attitude and many a storm has centered about the family dinner table, the stern parent insisting that a certain portion be eaten over in the face of evident nausea or even having the food vomited up. It is generally the digestive for certain articles of food has an entirely emotional basis, the color may not appeal, the shape resembles some object connected with unpleasant memories, it may have previously been eaten when the individual's sense of taste was perverted through illness, it may have one time been eaten to excess with unpleasant immediate consequences. There are also a number of such possible causes. But on the other hand, as has been definitely shown by medical science in the last few years the food may disagree with the person in question, and this in the absence of any existing functional or organic derangement of the intestinal tract. It has been found that many persons are what is called "sensitive" to one or more of a host of substances which may be introduced into the system through ingestion, inhalation, or through the skin by means of a hypodermic needle or a cut or scratch.

This is well recognized that hay fever and asthma in susceptible individuals follow the inhalation of the pollen of plants and grasses to which they may be hypersensitive. Some forms of hay fever, hives, rashes and vomiting, digestive disturbances, swellings, and other conditions, which are called "allergic" reactions, are due to the fact that one man's meat is another man's poison. In a statement of scientific fact.

It is possible for a physician to determine with a considerable degree of accuracy just what substances are the offenders and, when the prevention of further contact is impracticable, to immunize the patient, wholly or at least partially, so that future contacts will be without ill effect. So far, possibly, the best results have been gained in hay fever, but, as experience and knowledge accumulate, it is probable that many other conditions of ill health will succumb to intensive study and treatment along this line.

One reason of utmost value that has already been learned is that new foods must be introduced into the diet of infants and young children with extreme caution. Some babies are even hypersensitive to their own mother's milk, and react in a way that constitutes a serious danger not only to growth and development but perhaps to life itself. With others it may be cow's milk or commonly used foods, or oatmeal or wheat flour. Convulsions which are attributed to teething may be due, instead, to the beginning use of new foods, for both commonly occur at about the same time.

Isn't it a good thing hens don't realize how much backslivers get for laying tricks?

A SUCCESSFUL FAILURE

"Yes, my whole business went. I lost everything except my honor and the property which I'd just had time to put into my wife's name!"

If the girl says she doesn't believe she cares for a thing to eat, that means the bill won't be over $8.70.

Hobo: Lady, I don't know where my next meal is coming from. Woman of the House: Well, this is no information bureau.

BUT SHE HAS

I know a young lady named Rose. You can see she is wearing nice clothes. And, to boot of Rose. You would never suppose. She has holes in the top of her hose.

During the broadcast of a hotel orchestra a waiter dropped a kind of tray. The next day the station received a special delivery letter containing the following earnest query:

"Was it soup or coffee that splashed when the tray was dropped? We stand two to one in my family that it was a distinctive coffee splash, with only my wife holding out for soup."

The average husband hasn't as much sense as he thinks he has, but he has more than his wife suspects.

"They say Claire is a wonderful accompanist."

"Yes, I've often heard that she doesn't care where she goes."

joint pains, certain skin diseases, even convulsions, and many other obscure and ill-defined conditions of ill health have been found to be due sometimes to the extreme sensitiveness of the individual to which he comes in contact. Very often these happen to be foods which are in common use.

Priscilla Dean has been "run" over by automobiles; she has fallen out of airplanes and she has really risked her life many times to make her pictures thrilling and heart-stopping—but, that was before she became "The Speeding Venus."

In her latest Metropolitan release Priscilla did the professional "stunters" no better. She raced a fast transcontinental train to a crossing and won by a mere scant half light.

Priscilla is frank to admit that she was scared out of her senses. "If I had had any sense at all," she confesses, "I would have hesitated before risking my neck."

Everything came out all right, however, and Priscilla safely beat the train just as she was supposed to do in the story of the picture.

"The Speeding Venus," which is showing for the last time tonight at the Colonial theater, is a photoplay of thrills which has no if motif in an automobile race against time and villains. The hero crosses the desert, the high Sierras and meets with many thrilling adventures along the way.

Bill Gets a Tip, Too

BY TAYLOR

Now calm down before I hafta give you a hypodermic—sure I'm lettin' you in on it! C'mon down to th' bank an' take 500 bucks outa storage

Now Bill, you're sure this is a good thing—

Say, it's better than a first mortgage on th' Golden Gate—only one thing, though—you'll have to wait a couple days on your money—c'mon, now—let loose—act as if you were passin' out hand-bills

Nice work, Bill, ol' boy—th' first step was easy—an' I'll soon teach pop how to walk into another investment—guess he hasn't so dern much, but as th' horse trainer would say, "every bit helps"

Well, I hear you had a nice Christmas, Ossie! Do you know what comes next?

Sure—new year's day!

Yes—an' I'm going to resolve to say longer and better prayers at night!

Oh—I say long ones now—you'd be surprised how nice an' long they are!

Why they're this long anyway—yes—longer! Just to show you, come over some night an' listen to my prayers—it's ten minutes long at least!

Get out!

Say, that's nuttin'!! If I only had a pair of knee pads I could say longer ones!!

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

She: What's the best way to keep a New Year's resolution?

He: To yourself.
