THE BUSINESS PRIMER

The Office-Boy.
Oh, look you at the Of-fice Boy.
He noth-ing knows of earth-ly joy:
All call-ers, of what-ev-er sizes,
He most sev-erely criticizes:
Your name, your er-rand, eke your age
("Twill do no good for you to rage),
And if to see the boss you hope,
His answer is a "Nope!"
The Sten-nog-ra-pher.
I here would call your no-tice, please,
Un-to the Pound-er of the Keys:
"Ste-nog-ra-pher"—— don't ever flout one,
No office is com-plete with-out one.
Al-though she comes in late, it's true,
She'll stay until she's nearly through:
Her spe-cies—may a pun a-vail?
Is al-ways dead-ly with the mail.

Travel Impossible Near Redding, Cal.

REDDING, Cal., Jan. 6. (AP)—A severe storm throughout the entire country has turned streams into raging torrents and made travel impossible in several directions, Dick Williams, driver of the Carriville-Coffee stage, drove across a bridge between the two towns just before the entire structure collapsed and was carried away by the stream.

One of the bulls Lindbergh saw killed was finished off by the head of the traffic department of Mexico City. It was a case of when bull meats bull.

We wish the Red Cross could do something about that flood in Washington — we mean those bills.

AT THE THEATERS

Richard Dix In Romantic Role in Picture

Richard Dix knows what the public wants. He proved that again last night when his new Paramount starring picture "The Gay Defender" opened for a three day run at the Arcade theater.

Richard Dix is also an ambitious, hard-working young man. That too was proved last night. For he is going to have to work and work hard to beat the Arcade's new picture. For pure entertainment it is probably the best vehicle Dix has ever had. It is easily the best screen fare to be seen here this week.

Dix has turned to early California for the setting, and to the gold rush of '48 for the time of his new picture. Those adventurous days, when desperadoes and ruffians stormed into the newly acquired U. S. territory, provide a vivid background. The star himself plays Joaquin Murrieta, son of an aristocratic Spanish family and heir to a fortune in the form of a huge rancho. His happiness as the picture opens is made complete by his newly found love for the daughter of the new U. S. commissioner.

How the murder of the girl's father is charged to Dix, how he finds Americans plundering his mines, how his uncle is killed and his people oppressed, and how finally he turns to banditry to right the wrongs done him provide the outline of the stirring plot. As a night-riding, knife-throwing, whip-cracking bandit, Dix rages through the rest of the picture, as bold and spectacular an outlaw as was ever portrayed on the motion picture screen.

Thelma Todd, beautiful blonde newcomer, is the American girl and one we feel quite worthy to represent her sisters in a setting in which she is practically the only woman. Fred Kohler "wolf of the screen" is the able villain.

Credit for the excellence of the whole picture must in large measure go to Gregory La Cava who directed it, to Grover Jones, who wrote the original story, and to Ray Harris, Sam Mintz and Kenneth Raisback, the trio of scenarists who adapted it for the screen.

Double Bill Offered At Star Tonight

Do you like to travel? Would you enjoy a trip in the Pullman from your home town to New York City and the Gay White Way? Would you like to do this if it wouldn't cost you a cent.

It can be done!

In fact, no other than the movie star, Johnny Hines does it in his latest First National Picture, "Home Made," which is showing at the Star theater today and Saturday as one of the feature pictures on the double bill.

Johnny says it's very simple and even goes so far as to prove it.

The first thing to do, according to the comedian, is carry as little baggage as possible. Then slip into the men's smoking compartment and ask the porter for a cigarette. This will establish a friendly, democratic feeling.

So far, so good. But pretty soon some one will want a ticket. As you have none this is apt to be embarrassing. You must dodge the conductor smilingly. Very soon this will be impossible. When this time arrives, try to get hold of a porter's hat and coat.

But you must have a black face. Very simple! You must pick the time for having a black face about the time that your train decides to go through a tunnel. Then all you have to do is put your head and hands out of the window. You will find they are covered with soot.

Behold! You have become a Pullman porter and you can ride free!

Just the same, Johnny Hines advises caution, as he found himself in no end of trying predicaments, even when he became a porter. He fell in love with Margery Daw. But he couldn't make love to her when his face was all black. He was on his way to New York to put his mother's home-made jam on the retail market. And he is assisted by such prominent players besides Margery as Edmund Breese, Hal Wilt Jennings, Margaret Seddon, Maud Turner Gordon and Charles Gerard.

But Johnny's Pullman ride is worth finding out about!

A man—and has horse—and his dog!

This trio makes up the titular group of "The Fighting Three," Universal Blue Streak Western, showing at the Star theater today and Saturday as part of the double program. In support of Jack Hoxie who plays the starring role, will be seen Olive Hasbrouck, Marin Sais, William Nestor Daily, William Ives, George "Buck" Connors, Fanny Warren and Bert DeMare.

Bill Boyd Is Star In West Point Film

William Boyd, star of "Dress Parade", a new Pathe-DeMille special production, a story of the Cadet life at U. S. Military Academy at West Point, spent a strenuous period of four weeks during the filming of the photoplay at the Academy. The picture will be on view at the Colonial theater today and Saturday.

He entered as a "Plebe" and the classman who took him in hand is inclined to think that the upper forgot that he was just an actor, playing the role of a cadet.

"If I went to West Point with any idea of my own importance, I just lost it in the area of 'beast barracks'," said Boyd.

Boyd got many a thrill for being mistaken for a real "Plebe" and took many call-downs rumbly without protest.

One day while he was strolling from location in the barracks, he happened to be smoking a cigarette. An upper classman called him to attention, and ordered him to take that "snag out of his mouth", which he did. The plebes are not allowed to walk across the area which is the quadrangle surrounded by the barracks, but they have to go on a dog trot and more than once did Boyd find himself breaking into double time before the stern member of the "beast detail." When the boys enter the Academy, they are called "beasts" for two months and then become "Plebes." They are received into the corps at dress parade and from then on march with them.

Another day Boyd was lounging in the area, waiting for a call and an upper classman who did not recognize him called him to attention. He put him through his paces with such orders as "squeeze your neck back," "put wrinkles in your chin," and then disapproving of his awkward attempts to oblige, he bawled, "What company do you belong to?" Boyd replied: "The DeMille company, sir."

Many such incidents occurred daily and Boyd got quite a thrill at the thought of being a real West Pointer.

Bessie Love plays a featured feminine role opposite Boyd and other members of the cast are Hugh Allan, Louis Natheaux, Clarence Geldert and Maurice Ryan.
