The book has been produced after years of study to determine what will most help boys to make them. The cover design of the book was drawn by Norman Rockwell, famous illustrator, who has depicted an idealized boy's head, surrounded, in background, with heads of famous scouts and pioneers, including Daniel Boone, George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt and the newest of the group, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. The first edition of the new book exceeds 299,000 copies, with immediate reprintings to follow.

JOSEPH TOSSESS HERE ON FRIDAY

Cove to Play Tigers Saturday—Grade School Hoop Schedule Ready

The La Grande basketball team, strengthened by two experienced games last weekend and a week of steady practice, will meet the Joseph squad here tomorrow night in an effort to avenge their defeat at the hands of the Joseph tossers last Friday. The game will be played at the L. D. S. recreational hall. Coach Christie said this morning that his squad was in good condition for tomorrow's game, which is expected to be one of the most interesting of the basketball schedule this year.

Mr. Christie, as physical director of the La Grande public schools this morning announced the basketball schedule of the city grade schools, whose series begins tomorrow afternoon when Riveria and Greenwood mix at the high school at four o'clock.

Their schedule in full follows: Jan. 27, Greenwood vs. Central; Feb. 3, Riveria vs. Central; Feb. 10, Greenwood vs. Central; Feb. 17, Riveria vs. Greenwood; Feb. 24, Riveria vs. Central.

The series will be worked on a percentage basis. Practice has been under way for the past several weeks, each team devoting about four nights a week, under the supervision of their coaches, to work outs. Chester Gilbert, principal at Riveria, is coaching the last year's conference winner, Mr. DeLane, is mentor at Greenwood and Mr. Phinney is the coach at Central.

ONE TROUBLE IN THE LIFE OF MRS. FORD

(Continued from Page 1) yum, this tastes like more!" "Why, Henry Ford doesn't even smack his lips over a good piece of warm apple pie!" pretty, plump brown-eyed Mrs. Ford went on, as one who would say, "Now beat that in a man if you can."

"And the meals that have become cold waiting for him!" "Of course," Mrs. Ford softened her indignant of Henry as he turned patient and pleading eyes upon her. "I do think that altogether too much fuss is made over food today."

"I think most women are serving too rich, too elaborate foods to their families and guests. I think that the simple fare we all know as baked beans, baked apples, baked potatoes, potato and onion soup, brown bread, mother's apple pie, home-made cheese—that was the food that made strong minds and bodies. We have too many frothy, whipped creamy, highly seasoned foods today."

"In my own home," here Mrs. Ford flushed a little as if apologizing for making one a bit conscious of her position, "in our own home, with quite a bit of entertaining, I find it rather hard to serve the simple meals I would like to. But I try to eliminate much of the superfluous and unnecessary."

Mrs. Ford told me, as if surprised that anyone could ever wonder about it, that she took complete charge of her own kitchen, planning the meals, supervising the cooks, and even occasionally taking a whirl at a dish herself.

"I love cooking and I love kitchens," she told me. "Some of the happiest hours of my life were spent in warm, sunny, old-fashioned kitchens, popping corn, making fudge and taffy, playing games."

"Why, in the early days when Mr. Ford was working on his invention, we just lived in the kitchen."

Happy memories brought rosy floods of color to Mrs. Ford's sweet face and she smiled at her billionaire husband as if asking, "Happy days, weren't they?" and the great man nodded back at her.

As opposite as the two poles are Mr. and Mrs. Ford in public. His face, lined, stern, almost morose; hers, rosy and rosy and constantly wearing a smile. She is a plump, short little body. I have never seen a picture which does her justice.

Many of them have shown her as a rather plain, middle-aged, not at all stylish woman. But she has the snaky and chic of a debutante. Her brown hair, with hardly a gray thread in it, is not bobbed but is thick and tustrous and moistly twisted under in the close-fitting coiffure of the veed.

She wore a dark green velvet dress, low cut and sleeveless. Her jewels were a short strand of pearls with a diamond clasp, an emerald and diamond bracelet and two rings, a diamond and a diamond and onerald. Before the dancing began she wore a green and taupe metallic broadened evening wrap with pink collar. But she changed this for a white silk fringed shawl when the dance director began "calling off" the old-time dances.

Mr. Ford was talking with some men of science famous the world over as he set formed for the reel, but as the old-fashioned dance instruments, the spinet and dulcimer and fiddle, started the strains, he returned to Mrs. Ford and they were down on the floor in a twink.

Henry's shiny patent leather pumps and Mrs. Ford's silver ones cut the most grateful capers of any on the floor. Mr. Ford bowed low over his partner's hand, giving an extra fervent squeeze and an extra vigorous whirl every time the partner was Mrs. Ford.

"Topping Like Kids" "They romp together like a couple of kids," a bystander observed, and that seemed to hit the Ford-Ford relationship right on the head.

There is nothing of the gallant cavalier in Henry towards the Mrs. in public. He does not help her in or out of her coat. He does not take off her gaiters, nor help her down or up platforms. But he swings her high and wide in the Virginia reel.

Some commotion arose at this dancing party about Mrs. Ford's lost "party boots." Henry never budged as the frantic reception committee sought the boots everywhere.

"I can never get another pair like them," Mrs. Ford moaned. The boots, finally discovered under some coats, proved to be high black velvets edged with black fur, very much like the boots which little girls wore in the days when Clara Bryant met Henry Ford at a "barn party." The boots were marked 5.

"Henry thinks they're sensible for party shoes," Mrs. Ford said. "I'm glad he's low dancing even if he doesn't like his meals," she said, stopping to rest a minute while Mr. Ford merrily capered on. "It's his biggest happiness in life, I believe, and does him worlds of good."

The Fords had come down from Dearborn to Battle Creek for an evening session of the Bazaar Bazaar Conference and to put on an all-American dance for the convention.

JUDGE REGRETS MICHIGAN'S LAW

FLINT, Mich., Jan. 19 (AP)—A judge's vicariously expressed regret that he could not, under the law, impose a death sentence followed Adolph Hotelling today on his journey to a life's cell at the Marquette state prison.

Solitary confinement at hard labor for the rest of his life was the punishment Circuit Judge Fred M. Brennan decreed for Hotelling as the utmost penalty the state could exact for the kidnaping, slaying and mutilation of five-year-old Dorothy Schneider.

The trial and sentencing took place here yesterday after Hotelling had been spirited into the city from the state reformatory at Ionia. The proceeding required only a few minutes and Hotelling was immediately ordered on his way to Marquette by automobile, as a precaution against mob violence.

Judge Shouts "You appear to have no regrets," said Judge Brennan in passing sentence after the defendant had admitted details of the assault and slaying without show of emotion.

"The details as shown by this confession and the proof convince me that we should have capital punishment in this state."

"The sentence of this court is that you be confined in the Marquette branch prison in solitary confinement at hard labor for the balance of your life."

The prisoner made no response and the judge shouted: "Hard labor, in solitary confinement, for the rest of your life! do you understand?"

The slayer nodded his head in acknowledgement and the trial was over.

As the stolid church deacon was brought into the court room, Lester Schneider, father of the child victim, sprang from his seat and struck the man squarely in the face. The room was thrown into an uproar, but quiet was soon restored and Schneider was taken from the room.

Proceedings Secret From Flint, Hotelling was taken to Saginaw and locked up. Early today prisoner and guards entrained for Marquette. So secret were the entire proceedings that residents of Saginaw were not aware that the slayer had been harbored there until after the party had left.

During the trip to Saginaw Hotelling alternately broke into fits of praying and weeping.

"How could I do it," he repeated over and over again. Frequently he referred to his own daughter, Louise.

"How I love her," he said. Officers guarded him closely to prevent a suicide attempt.

LEGION POST TO HAVE OWN BURIAL PLOT (Continued from Page 1) men, not in family lots, into the new section, at the requests of relatives of the deceased, in the near future. Next spring, just as soon as weather permits grading and seeding of the lots will get under way and plans will be planned to carry out plans for making the section a beautiful one. It is in a slightly higher, and is to the left of the entrance of the Masonic cemetery off Fourth street. Memorial services at the cemetery may now be held in the American Legion section. May Erect Monument The Masonic Cemetery association made the arrangement on 11th street on which individual family lots are sold, that is $200 for the lot, $100 of which goes to the general upkeep of the cemetery and the other $100 to the permanent endowment on the lot. Through the gift given by the association, the legion needed only to advance the money necessary for the endowment fund. Last year a committee went to the Masonic association, to consider the possibility of purchasing the ground. The generous offer of the Masons followed later. In announcing the completion of the plan this morning legion heads mentioned the possibility that some day a monument, a tribute to the departed soldiers, might be erected on the lot. The grave markers provided for all ex-service men by the government may be used on the graves of the American Legion section and will provide a uniformity that is desirable, said Mr. Thompson this morning.

Will Be Reburied KANSAS CITY, Jan. 19 (AP)—The bodies of Joseph Smith, founder of Mormonism and his brother, Hyrum, found at Nauvoo, Ill., will be placed in a tomb there, officials of the reorganized church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints announced today at their headquarters in Independence, a suburb. It was announced that the bodies would be placed in a large concrete tomb on the spot where they have rested for more than 59 years. Officials said they had made positive identification of the bodies along with those of Emma Hale Smith, wife of Joseph Smith, and Lucy Mack, his mother.
