PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 24 (AP)—Mayor and Mrs. George L. Baker narrowly escaped being swept into the ocean off Tillamook head Friday afternoon, it was learned yesterday.

They had gone out to the point to fish. Just after the mayor had made his first cast a gigantic wave rolled in covering the rocks. The mayor had barely enough time to grab hold of Mrs. Baker and brace himself to prevent their being carried into the sea. One of his ankles was badly bruised in the adventure. Mrs. Baker was drenched but suffered no ill effects.

HEALTH

AN EVER-PRESENT ENEMY

By Charles H. Christwood, M. D., New York City

Member Gorman Memorial

The human family is menaced by an ever-present enemy in the form of disease. This enemy employs the very same methods of attack, of invasion, and of inflicting damage that any other enemy might be expected to employ. In making this illustration, the human body may be regarded as a citadel which is being attacked by an invading army. The enemy will enter the besieged precinct by whatever opening it finds, and having made an entry, unless proper measures for protection and counter-attack have been instituted, will get the better of the situation and inflict damage in proportion to the strength of the invasion and its dangerous character. The common ports of entry by which such an enemy can reach the citadel of the human body are through the air, by water, and by many ways from the ground. In other words, the germs of disease are breathed, swallowed, or inoculated into the blood. Some people make light of the danger of disease transmission from the implantation of germs, but one has only to review the splendid achievements of public health departments in preventing and checking epidemics—the great advantage in protection by vaccination, which has caused an increasing diminution in disease—to realize the magnitude of the scientific knowledge that has been acquired after many years of study.

There is today no such thing as an epidemic of smallpox. Vaccination so widely promulgated has reduced the likelihood of an epidemic to a negligible possibility. Typhoid fever is preventable by protection of the water supply, the isolation of germ carriers, and the employment of preventable vaccines. Malaria can be prevented by getting rid of all the mosquitoes that carry the disease from man to man. Some interesting statistics were published recently regarding the prevention of pneumonia. It is known that the contact infection is a rare one, yet the total number of cases throughout the country is not small and could be avoided by proper measures of prevention. The prevention of scarlet fever has recently been along the same lines as the prevention of diphtheria, which latter disease has been largely minimized through preventive measures in the form of immunization through the use of serum.

Measles is not generally regarded as a serious malady but, when it is realized that young children in institutions who are victims of this malady die of the complications of lung conditions, it becomes a matter of importance to meet this malady with measures of prevention in order to avert more serious consequences. Hence it has now become the custom in institutions to immunize young children, particularly, by the injection of a little of the blood serum from convalescents.

Other diseases could be mentioned here which have been partially or completely mastered through preventive methods. In the meantime science continues its relentless search for new preventive data.

The year 1928 will probably see some interesting and vital developments, with the ever-present enemy of disease played further on the defensive.

Pain in Your Shoulder?

It's Probably Neuritis; Use Tysmol for Relief

Knife-like jabs of pain in the vicinity of the shoulder are generally due to neuritis, brought on by exposure to draughts or sudden changes of weather. In some cases there is stiffness or soreness in the muscles, making it difficult to raise the arm. The safest and easiest way to relieve such an attack is to apply a small quantity of Tysmol over the affected area. This small and cooling preparation is quickly absorbed through the pores and carried to the throbbing, aching peripheral nerves. The pains usually stop at once, and in a very short time the last trace of soreness should disappear. Tysmol is absolutely harmless—free from drugs. Recommended for all forms of nerve pain, whether caused by neuritis, neuralgia, sciatica or rheumatism. You can get a good supply for $1 at any drug store. Always an head at GLASS DRUGS, Inc.

Informed by a banker that she would have to find some one to introduce her before he could cash her check, a flapper said: "Aw, quit your kidding! This is a business deal, not a social stunt."

Head of Stock: "There's Jim carrying two ladders at a time, and you're only taking one."
Pat: "Sure, he must be too lazy to go back twice!"

If you do right you will be criticized. If you do wrong you will be criticized. You might as well do right.

THE WEATHER
We read the forecast every day.
We list to hear what others say.

To test the wind we wet our thumbs; but after all, we take what comes.

"You say financial troubles brought you here?" asked the hospital visitor. "Why, that's hardly possible!"
"It's a fact, though," retorted the patient. "I was crossing the other side of the street to avoid one of my creditors and saw another creditor on the other side. While I was trying to escape, a car hit me."

He may not pay for advertising, but you can't have noticed that the fellow who caught the big fishes walked right down Main street with it instead of sneaking up the alley.

IN REPLY WOULD STATE—
The tired business man came home after a long day at the office. The family gathered for the news. The tired business man bowed his head to ask the blessing and all was quiet.
"This is Mr. Jones speaking!" he began.

Strains of music from the saxophone is sometimes a strain on the neighbors.

Fond Father—If you are a good boy, I'm going to get you a nice cake with five candles on it for your birthday—one candle for each year.

Five-Year-Old—I'd rather have five cakes with one candle, daddy.

One hundred Kansas bachelors have formed a club to resist matrimony. We don't know who promotes these good will tours, but Peggy Joyce isn't working.

AT THE THEATERS

Virginia Valli Has Fine Role in Gay Romance

"Ladies Must Dress," a most entertaining picture will be shown at the Arcade theater Wednesday night. It is a Fox Films production, featuring Virginia Valli and Lawrence Gray, and was written and directed by Victor Heerman. The cast is small but capable. It includes Earle Foxe, Nancy Carroll and Hallam Cooley.

Miss Valli, as a stenographer in a big department store, acquires herself most creditably in a very difficult role. In many of the sequences she has to wear old-fashioned clothing and maintain a restraint both sympathetic and convincing. She gets innumerable laughs, as her comedy is of the most delicious order, but she also brings moisture to many eyes when she plumbs the depths of pathos. Lawrence Gray is splendid in the male supporting role. Earle Foxe is "something different" in villainous, Nancy Carroll and Hallam Cooley add many comical touches to the action. The picture is splendidly and the photography altogether charming. There are many beautiful shots of Miss Valli. In these, the changes have the peculiar beauty of the camera.

SOCKING STORMS

Rainy weather in the Pacific Northwest doesn't stump Seattle girls. They're taken to the fact of wearing three or four pairs of silk hose, and when the top pair gets wet they just shed one. Four pairs last a whole rainy day. Miss Jessie Baker kindly demonstrates.

Madge Bellamy Featured in "Silk Legs"

Phil Taylor's slogan, "All's fair in love and business," brings down the wrath of an innocent little female drummer down on his head in the Fox Films production, "SILK LEGS," which is showing today and Wednesday.

Disgusted by the failure of a week's work, Ruth Stevens, a winsome hostess, drummer, is in no mood to return the flirtatious glances bestowed upon her by Phil. Anxious to make an impression, Phil confesses that he is the world's best hooded salesman and that he was smart enough to have cancelled the orders taken by some "dumb dame" selling for a rival concern.

Ruth learns his methods and inflicts a crushing defeat on Phil by flirting with the president of their largest buyers of hosiery and winning the order.

Madge Bellamy gives a vivid impersonation of the female drummer and is given splendid assistance by James Hall, who gives an excellent account of himself as the egotistical salesman.

Others in the cast are Joseph Cawthorn and Maude Fulton. Arthur Rosson directed the production.

Mrs. Hickman With Son In Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 24 (AP)—Hiding their faces from the battery of cameras, and the eyes of the curious, Mrs. Eva Hickman, mother of William Edward Hickman, confessed kidnaper and slayer of Marian Parker, arrived Monday from Kansas. She accompanied by one of her other sons, Albert.

Mrs. Hickman planned, defense attorneys said, to proceed at once to the county jail to meet her son.

However, the confessed killer's
