HEALTH

YOUR HEART AND YOUR HEALTH

By H. H. Hines, M. D., Cincinnati, O.

Member of the American Medical Association. Diseases of the heart and blood vessels have become the chief problem in disease prevention. One-fourth of all deaths are due to their ravages. Their death toll is four times that of tuberculosis. It nearly equals the combined mortality of influenza, pneumonia, diphtheria, scarlet fever, typhoid fever, meningitis, aliphtheria, and scarlet fever.

Heart disease respects no age group. One child in 150 has an impaired heart. The disease apparently strikes its victims down suddenly and swiftly, but as a matter of fact it comes on insidiously and usually kills slowly. In many cases there is a history of infection early in life, from diseased tonsils, scarlet fever, the poisons of diphtheria, scarlet fever, and other infectious diseases, which attack the lining of the heart, the valves, and adjacent blood vessels.

This greatest single cause of death cuts off its victims before the half-way station in the normal expectancy of life is reached. For a long period of years before the end, more than 2,000,000 people in our country are incapacitated more or less in the pursuit of life's activities. Twenty-five per cent of the persons attending the city dispensaries have heart diseases. Ten per cent of the total bed capacity in hospitals is given over to the care of heart cases.

This gloomy picture is painted for a purpose. The public must be made aware of the alarming ravages of heart disease. There is still hope for the future control of the disease. To know the extent and dangers of heart disease is the inspiration to watchful care to prevent it and the correction of conditions which increase the rapidity of its progress among those who are already afflicted.

Obviously, heart disease can best be prevented or cured in childhood. Any acute infectious disease or diseased tonsils or decayed teeth should have prompt attention to prevent heart damage. Careful examination of the heart by a competent physician should never be neglected. Heart abnormalities of whatever character require close supervision of the ordinary activities of life with regular rest periods, unstimulating diet, and correct health habits.

Adults should avoid as far as possible the over-stress and strain of modern living. We work too hard. We play too hard. Too many men in middle life think they are iron men and indulge too strenuously in golf, tennis and polo. They cannot compete with younger men and women in outdoor games very long. The heart won't stand it. Comes a day of overstrain, a sudden dilatation of weakened heart muscle, and it is all over.

Business worries, anxieties, hours of hectic strivings after whatever prize our ultra-modern civilization holds out in lure, overfeeding, overmental and physical stimulation, late hours, insufficient rest—all these are increasing the toll of heart disease.

Be on your guard. Rest more. Quit fretting. Have your physician examine your heart at least twice a year. Be guided by what he tells you of the limit of strain your heart will stand.

Lady: "I want four pounds of brown sugar, two boxes of raisins and—"
Grocer: "I'm sorry, lady, but we are out of yeast."

"I wish Kark: "You young lads of today want too much. Do you know what I was getting when I married your aunt?"
Maurice: "This nephew: "No, and I'll bet she didn't either."

A visitor was being shown through an English insane asylum. He noticed one of the inmates, an American, who was jabbering senselessly and covering his cell with diagrams.

"What a pathetic case," he remarked.
"Yes," replied the superintendent. "He tried to explain to some Englishmen what waffle were."

The train halted for a moment at the station and the traveler reached out, called a small boy, and said: "Son, here's fifty cents. Get me a twenty-five cent sandwich, and get one for yourself. Hurry up!" Just as the train pulled out the boy ran up to the window.

"Here's your quarter, Mister," he shouted. "They only had one sandwich."
Johnny: "Is that lion or Honess, papa?"
Father: "Which one, dear?"
Johnny: "The one with his face scratched and the hair off his head."
Father: "That must be the lion."

A lightning-bur is like most human beings—he can't see where he is going—he can only see where he has been.

Sheik—I think I've seen this play Astoria before.
Gladys—Don't show your ignorance. Astobes is the Latin word for welcome.

To most people "home" is the sweetest word in the English language. With others the sweetest two words are "down town."

AT THE THEATERS

"Merry Cavalier" Showing At Colonial

Each famous motion picture star has some aspect or characteristic that seems to lift him out of the ruck and place him alone in that particular respect. In "The Merry Cavalier," showing today at the Colonial theater, Dick Tailmadge seems to represent that spirit of adventurous chivalry which, since the beginning of time, has sent brave men into strange and solitary places in search of adventure and the glory of their lady fair. Dick doesn't have the "lady fair"; he finds her along with the adventure, and how he manages to get out of his adventure and win his lady love makes a story that fits the versatile star as no other ever did. Charlotte Stevens as the "lady fair" is a lovely and capable actress, and must have proved a wonderful incentive for the "Merry Cavalier" to perform the hair-raising escapades he does with such apparent sang-froid.

A fine story by Grover Jones, excellent photography by Jack Stevens and the splendid direction Noel Mason coupled with extraordinary acting have resulted in a superlative entertainment.

Arcade To Show "East Side, West Side"

The New York Times has called "East Side, West Side," by Captain Felix Hosenberg, an "epic of Manhattan." The Evening Post has said that he came nearer to writing the story of the city than any one else who ever tried it. In the same way, the Fox Film version, coming Thursday to the Arcade theater for a three day run, is a true epic of the film world. Allan Dwan has lost none of the rugged sincerity which was the distinguishing characteristic of the book.

It is the kind of picture which has long been needed to give the world an authentic conception of New York, for the people in small towns have grown to think of it almost entirely in terms of night clubs, Broadway theaters and the tinsel gaiety of Coney Island.

Its Ghetto, with the chaotic jumble of brass shops, push carts and colorful Hebrew types, has remained practically unknown. So also, has the shifting procession of barges, great liners and small craft that piles back and forth on its rivers.

Now and then a picture is released which shows fairly accurately some one phase of the city, but never before has the vast panorama which extends from the Battery to the Bronx been unraveled on any screen.

"East Side, West Side," as a book, and "East Side, West Side," as a picture, has sought honestly to do this very thing. It has what so many books and pictures lack completely—the background of a really big idea, and the additional merit of a strong plot to build against it.

An exceptional cast presents the dramatic Hosenberg story with feeling and nice truth to detail. George O'Brien and Virginia Valli are the principals.

Others well known on stage and screen are J. Farrell MacDonald, Dore Davidson, Sonia Nodubsky, June Collyer, John Miller, Holmes Herbert, Frank Lodge, Dan Wolheim, John Dooley, John Kearney, Edwin Garvey, Frank Atkinson, Gordon Macfies and Harold Levitt.

Woman's Fight Theme of Comedy Film

Can women compete successfully with men as drummers on the road and at the same time retain their feminine charm? This question is dealt with humorously in "Silk Legs," Fox Film's screen version of Frederica Sagor's fascinating story of Atlantic City, featuring Maude Bellamy, which is showing tonight for the last time at the Star theater.

Ruth Stevens is a very successful business drummer until the advent of Phil Parker, twentieth century edition of the modern drummer, whose business methods play havoc with Ruth's orders.

Parker's methods are old but reliable. He believes in playing the female buyers, who fall for his line of snuff. As for Ruth, she sells for wares on their merits.

"Can she compete against such odds?"
Miss Bellamy, the clever little comedienne, answers that question in "Silk Legs" in a manner that is sure to appeal to everyone.

A particularly well-chosen cast supports Miss Bellamy, including James Hill, Joseph Cavethorn and Maude Polton. Arthur Rosson directed the production.

MAHARAJAH IS OPPOSED TO WEDDING PLAN

BOMBAY, India, Jan. 25. (AP)—A dispatch to the Bombay Chronicle today from Indore said that the young maharajah, Yeshwant Rao, is opposed to the marriage of his father, the former maharajah, to Miss Nancy Ann Miller, of Seattle, Wash.

Yeshwant Rao, who is at Oxford university, sent a message to one of his father's aides de camp expressing disapproval on the ground that the former ruler already has two wives.

The cousins and other relatives of the former ruler appear to be against the marriage but will not dare to incur the displeasure of the ruling prince by cooperating with the former maharajah, whose agents are working strenuously in behalf of their master.

The Indore correspondent of the paper does not think that the local aryanism, or Hindu ritualism, is the cause of the opposition.

It is the kind of picture which has long been needed to give the world an authentic conception of New York, for the people in small towns have grown to think of it almost entirely in terms of night clubs, Broadway theaters and the tinsel gaiety of Coney Island.

Its Ghetto, with the chaotic jumble of brass shops, push carts and colorful Hebrew types, has remained practically unknown. So also, has the shifting procession of barges, great liners and small craft that piles back and forth on its rivers.
