MARKET SLOW AS TRADING BEGINS

Butter and Eggs Are Unchanged in Portland Exchange This Morning

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 30 (AP)—Local wholesale markets were slow this morning with trading dull and prices for the most part steady.

Country dressed meats were a little easier due to fairly heavy receipts and moderate demand. Fancy veal was quoted around 15¢.

Butter and egg prices were unchanged this morning, with receipts of both fairly heavy. There were no indications early today of any substantial price changes.

In the fruit and vegetable divisions things were rather quiet today. It appears that most of the excitement in the onion market has subsided and prices to growers have slipped downward somewhat.

The potato market continues stagnant with growers selling for what they can get, for the most part.

General Losses Partly Cut By Rally in Street

NEW YORK, Jan. 30 (AP)—General losses of 1 to 2 points in the stock market today were substantially cut down in the final hour when traders seemed impressed by the quality of buying in some of the public utility and specialty shares.

Montana Power rose from 143 to 154½. Peoples Gas touched a new peak above 175, and Federal Light and Traction reached 53. Baybutt Cigars, in which a strong pull is reported to be working, ran up to 125, a gain of almost 10 points.

Such speculative favorites as Greene Cananea Copper and A. M. Beyer recovered 4 to 5 points from their early low figures but the rally in standard rails and industrials was limited to a point or so.

The closing was heavy. Montana Power closed 150, the rumored objective of the stock, with a rush in the final hour. It had sold earlier as low as $14 in common with weakness in other sections.

Colorado Fuel went above $2 but the remainder of the list appeared to meet fresh offerings on recovery.

Total sales approximated 2,300,000 shares.

GENERAL HAIG IS DEAD IN LONDON; COLLAPSE SUDDEN

seven centuries of military service by the ancient and illustrious family of Haig of Bomerseyde, in Berkshire. Like so many other clans they rose from the quarrels of Bruce and Balliol and once established they were represented whenever the history of Scotland was being made.

From the day he was born June 19, 1861, the third and youngest son of John Haig, J. P., of Cambridge, Pifeshire, a military career was planned for Douglas Haig.

It fell to General Haig to command the English division at the first battle of the Marne and this he did with such skill that his work was singled out by Lord French in his report to the war office. For this service Haig was made a full general and despite the fact that there were older and more experienced officers in the field he came to be recognized as the ablest of the English commanders.

Trained Toward Cavalry His knowledge of the strategic importance of the cavalry and his faith in that branch of service caused him to use it more than most commanders in the great conflict with the Germans. The retreats from Mons and Ypres covered by the cavalry have been known as the finest examples of military science produced in the war. This brought more commendation for the commander of the First Corps and when on December 15, 1915, French was relieved of the supreme command of the English forces and raised to peerage, the nation in one loud acclaim welcomed the appointment of Haig to the command of his friend. After the appointment of Foch as generalissimo, Haig's service was so brilliant as to win him further renown.

He had been appointed field marshal in 1917 for distinguished service and when he returned to England after the war the mantle of Wellington by popular desire was thrust upon his shoulders. In

How would you like to take a trip up to the clouds. That would be good sport for a good many folks, while others seldom think of such a thing, but in order to give us a little thrill the clouds come down to us and then we don't appreciate it. Now that is just the way with prices. If some folks could take a trip to some large mail order house, they would at least buy an interest in it before they left. But when prices are cut right down to the bone in your home town, even lower than any mail order house, that is something you really should appreciate. They say money has wings but some people think it might be true but seldom flies toward home.

"To Loan-- Forty Years Of Financial Experience"

What to do and when to do it—knowing the answers to those questions form the basis of most financial successes. Doing the right thing at the right time.

No one's business judgment is perfect. There is always danger of making mistakes, and even the most attractive ventures in a financial way may have disadvantages not apparent on the surface that make them doubtful.

It is worthy of note that most successful men never depend entirely on their own experience and judgment in planning their affairs and in making investments. Invariably they seek the experience and advice of other men.

Usually—and quite naturally—it is their banker. He loans money and charges for it. But he loans experience and counts it a privilege to be of service to a customer in that way.

A bank, by its very nature, has contact with all varieties of business and investments through the many years of its existence. Its knowledge and judgment in such matters is a great asset to any customer.
