Dr. and Mrs. Ingle Host and Hostess At Dinner Party

The first of a series of three dinner parties to be given this week by Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Ingle took place last evening at their attractive home on Second street, when they entertained 28 guests.

Dinner was served at 7:15 o'clock at several small tables, the decoration of which hinted of the approaching spring season. Rosebuds furnished a centerpiece for each table and baskets of beautiful spring flowers, such as daffodils, freesias and pussywillows, were artistically arranged about the rooms. Pink and yellow were the predominating colors.

Bridge was played following dinner and prizes were won by Mrs. J. F. Ravenscroft, Mrs. A. T. Hill, Harvey P. Matthews and J. F. Ravenscroft.

This evening Dr. and Mrs. Ingle will entertain at a second bridge-dinner and on Thursday evening of this week the third party will be given.

Styles Are Influenced by Powder, Rouge

By Hazel Reavis
(Associated Press Fashion Editor)

PARIS (AP)—The make-up box and its use and abuse on two sides of the Atlantic each year decides the profit and loss of many fabric manufacturers, as well as dressmakers, says an analytical style creator.

Because American women do not make up extensively for the daytime they are unable to wear some of the colors French women and French fashion-trades specialize in. Difficult greens, mauve and flat yellows, all of them colors about which Paris seems to be meditating more or less seriously for spring promotion, may be among the most successful of the new colors in Paris, but they will have only a limited sale on the other side of the Atlantic, says the specialist.

French women, he explains, will change their make-up to accommodate the fashionable colors of the season. American women, on the other hand, insist on having the colors which they can wear in the daytime without more than a coat of powder on their noses. All the wiles and advertising of cosmetic manufacturers have failed to convert the bulk of American womanhood to extensive use of make-up. She may heighten her natural effects but she rarely will change them.

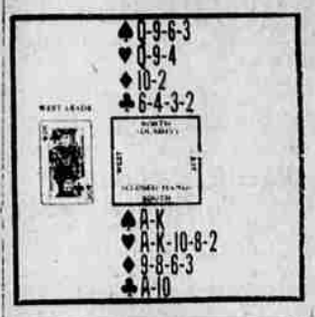
Mauve is one of the notoriously difficult colors for the average woman to wear. Experience has proved, according to more than one creator of international styles, that outside of Europe the shades entail a loss for the average retailer, even if the wholesalers and manufacturers by consistent advertising and promotion, are able to make the dealers believe a mauve season is in prospect.

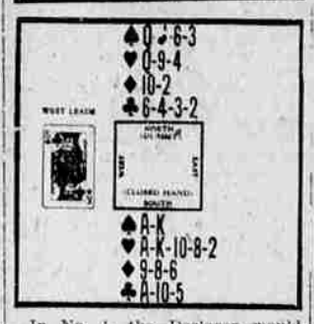
A magazine editor is a fellow who sends a piece of copy to the composing room, and then prays that nothing will happen to make it sound foolish when it appears in print three months afterward.

Bridge Pointers

By Milton C. Work

Yesterday I gave two hands and asked how the Declarer in each case, seeing his Dummy hand and therefore knowing all of the 26 cards that he would have the opportunity of playing with a common purpose, should plan his campaign in order to obtain the best result. The hands follow: South is Declarer playing with Hearts the trump, and in each case West has led the King of Clubs.





In No. 1, the Declarer would appreciate that he must lose one Club trick and two Diamond tricks; should he lose more, he would fail to make game. Fortunately Dummy has only two Diamonds, so that hand can ruff a third round of Diamonds, and the fourth Diamond probably can be discarded on Dummy's Queen of Spades. If this can be accomplished and the five adverse trumps are divided three in one hand and two in the other, Declarer can go game. Planning along these lines, Declarer should win the King of Clubs with the Ace and forthwith lead a small Diamond. If the adversaries lead two more rounds of Clubs (as is probable), South will trump the second (the third Club lead) and then lead another Diamond.

What will happen then depends upon which adversary wins the second Diamond and what is led next; but even if it be a fourth Club (the most disadvantageous lead for Declarer that could be made), he still has a chance to get game although he must take every remaining trick. After ruffing the fourth club he would lead his small trump, win with Queen in Dummy, return a trump from Dummy and win with Ace in Closed Hand. Next lead his Ace and King of Spades, then lead a third Diamond for Dummy to ruff; next lead the Queen of Spades from Dummy on which he would discard his last Diamond, and then he would have the King of trumps in Closed Hand with which to win the last trick.

In No. 2, the Declarer would plan quite differently. He would see that if he attempted to ruff a Diamond in Dummy and should lead Diamonds for that purpose, he would lose two Diamonds and two Clubs. He therefore should win the first Club trick, lead his Ace and King of Hearts if both adversaries follow suit to both trumps; he then should lead his Ace and King of Spades, and next a third round of Hearts, winning with the Queen in Dummy. In this way, with the adverse Hearts divided 3-2—as they must be with four played on the first two rounds of trumps, he would exhaust the trumps and put Dummy in the lead to cash the Queen and Jack of Spades, on which Closed Hand would obtain two discards and the combined hands would lose only three tricks.
