Mrs. W. H. Leisman Entertains Club At Bridge-Dinner

Member of the Alpha club were guests at a delightful bridge-lunch-dinner yesterday afternoon when Mrs. W. H. Leisman was hostess at her home on Walnut street. Lunch was served at 1:15 o'clock at three small tables, where bridge was enjoyed later in the afternoon. A color scheme of red and white, in keeping with St. Valentine's day was used to decorate the rooms. Red carnations were the flowers used.

Mrs. C. D. Putman made high score among the club members and the guest prize went to Mrs. W. H. Guld.

The Swastika Bridge club met last evening with Mr. and Mrs. William Gable as host and hostess at their home on Ninth street. Three tables of bridge were at play during the evening. Mrs. Walter Nowland made high score among the women players and the men's prize was won by Mr. Nowland. The guest prizes went to Mr. and Mrs. John Fields.

Decorations were in keeping with St. Valentine's day. After the card games a two-course luncheon was served by the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. Nowland will entertain the club Thursday evening, Feb. 16.

Mrs. J. P. Caldwell was hostess to the Jolly Bridge club yesterday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Audmer Playle, on Fourth street. Three tables were at play during the afternoon and high score went to Mrs. Playle. The consolation to Mrs. R. H. Hartenbower and the guest prize to Mrs. H. G. Avery.

The season's cut flowers were used to decorate the rooms. Red and white were the predominating colors. After the card games the hostess served a two-course luncheon.

Mr. Lee Hanford will be hostess to the club Thursday, Feb. 16.

Mrs. George T. Cochran was hostess to the Thursday Bridge club yesterday afternoon. After luncheon at 1 o'clock at the Foley hotel, the club members went to the Cochran home where three tables of bridge were at play during the remainder of the afternoon. Mrs. E. S. Ivanhoe made high score. Mrs. W. S. Harer will be hostess to the club next Thursday.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

In considering Contract bids, we concluded yesterday the original two-bids in a Major, today's subject will be original Major three-bids—that is of course in Hearts or Spades. Such bids serve two purposes: (a) they are pre-emptive, just as in Auction Bridge and (b) they invite the partner to jump the suit named to four without normal support in the suit and when holding an ace strength one ace, a King-Queen (of the same suit), a King of the suit bid, or two other Kings. Examples of sound initial Major three-bids follow:

No. 1	No. 2
None	A-K-X-X-X-X
Q-Q-J-X-X-X	X
A-K-Q-X	X
K-X-X	A-K-X-X

No. 3	No. 4
J-10-X	A-K-X
A-K-Q-X-X-X	A-K-Q-J-10
A-Q	A-Q
A-X	X-X-X

Initial three-bids indicate that, supposing a normal division of the remaining cards, the hand that made the bid will take a minimum of eight tricks and has a fair chance of taking at least one more if the suit named be the trump. Consequently a three-bid justifies partner's jump from three to four when he holds one trick, and releases him from any obligation to have normal support in the suit he is jumping.

Like original two-bids of both kinds—No Trump or suit—and like original three No Trump bids, three of a suit should be bid originally with exactly the same strength regardless of the bidder's position at the table.

Three-bids are made only with hands so strong that but little help is needed from partner to make game, and none needed to avert catastrophe. The danger that arises from a timid two-bid of Spades or Hearts is that partner may be too weak to jump a two-bid, and yet have strength enough to jump from three to four. Thus the two-bid would stop short of a game-ruer while a three-bid would arrive at that desirable declaration.

S. S. Kresge Couldn't Find Domestic Happiness for Himself, So He Gave $725,000 to Provide Orphan Homes

DETROIT, Feb. 2. (NEA)—Sébastien S. Kresge, multi-millionaire chain store owner, never had much luck in his efforts to find domestic happiness.

His first marriage ended four years ago in a divorce, with four of his five children going to live with their mother. The second marriage, contracted shortly after the divorce, is now in the divorce court also.

But Kresge loves children and has his own ideas about how they should be raised. It is said that one thing that particularly attracted him to the Methodist Children's Home Society here was its motto, a quotation from the minutes of a Methodist conference in Delaware in 1779: "What shall be done with the children? A. Meet them once a fortnight and examine the parents with regard to their attitude towards them."

It happens that Kresge, who is spending a fortune to provide orphaned children with real homes, has been in the papers a great deal because of his domestic troubles.

His first wife, Anna J. Kresge, divorced him in 1924. The second wife, Doris Kresge, whom he married shortly after his divorce, is now suing for a divorce.

In the first Mrs. Kresge's divorce suit, it is recalled, was the complaint that Kresge was given a fault-finding and that he complained frequently over the number in which she trained their children. In the new cottage-homes the Methodist society will have the benefit of the most careful training that social workers can give.

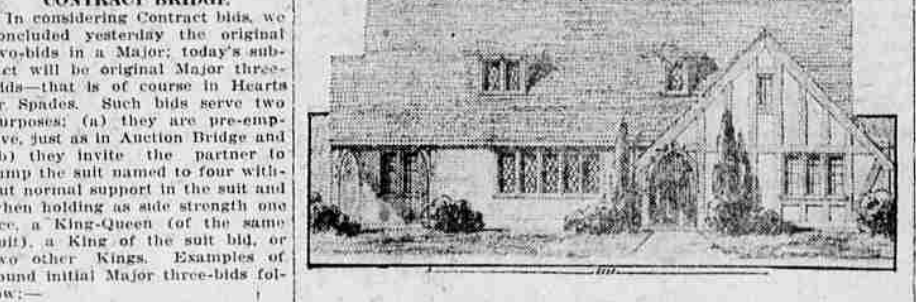

There will be, first of all, skilled personal attention to make sure that each child is 100 per cent physically at all times. In addition, the services of the Child Guidance Clinic, which works under the society's auspices, have been offered for use in building character.

"Science, love and religion will blend their best forces toward making better childhood and informed and competent parenthood," said an official of the organization.

All Will Be 'Drys'

In this connection, it might be added that all of the men in residence in the cottage will be "dry." Kresge's enthusiasm for the prohibition cause is well known.

"We have embarked on this program in wholesale fashion," said Miss Knight. "In the laboratory we are hoping to turn the tragedies

Children at the Methodist Children's Home Society cottages, to be built through the generosity of S. S. Kresge, chain store magnate, will get the best medical attention available. This photo was taken at the building where the society now cares for its wards, and shows nurses caring for a little chap who eventually will move into one of the home-like cottages, shown below in an architect's drawing.

Kresge is fond of children and called on his attorney and asked if having to grow up without a home and parental care.

And so he has given the Methodist Children's Home society here $725,000 to build an orphanage of a radically different type—a place that will give each child the best imitation of a real home that possibly can be provided.

A tract of 28 acres has been bought just outside the city limits, and in a few weeks a group of cottages will be built there.

Each cottage will house three or four children. A paid woman social worker will live with the children in each cottage, looking after them just as a mother would. Married social workers will be chosen as often as possible, so that the husband may live in the cottage also and stand in the relation of a father to the orphans.

Miss Frances Knight, director of the society, who made the plans public, says that each cottage will be as much like a regular home as possible.

"The husband need not be a social worker," she explained. "In fact, he may be anything—an employe of an automobile factory, a carpenter, a musician, or the like, provided that he has a love for BREAKFAST—California grapes, cereal, cream, fish hash, rice muffins, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Spaghetti in tomato sauce, curly endive with bacon dressing, baked custard, milk, tea.

DINNER—Casserole of chicken, mashed potatoes, French fried onions, pineapple and cottage cheese salad, vanilla ice cream with hot chocolate sauce, milk, coffee.

A last spring's chicken, or fowl to be exact, can be used deliciously in casserole. The fowl is cut in pieces for serving, rolled in flour and browned in hot fat on all sides. A gravy is then made, using the fat in which the chicken was browned and poured over the chicken in a deep casserole. The whole is covered closely and cooked about three hours in a moderate oven.

Fish Hash

One cup left-over flaked fish, 2 cups finely chopped cold boiled potatoes, 1 cold boiled beet, 2 thin slices fat salt pork.

Fry fat from salt pork and keep slice hot. Combine fish and potato and add to pork fat. Shake the frying pan and stir mixture lightly with a fork to coat each particle of fish and potato. Cover and cook over a low fire until brown on the bottom. Sprinkle with minced beet and turn out on a hot platter. Garnish with fat salt pork and serve.

The children that are cared for by the society come from various places—from social agencies, from juvenile court, from bewildered parents whose homes have been split in the divorce courts and from different Methodist churches in Michigan.
