HEALTH

ACUTE APPENDICITIS

By H. E. Randall, M. D., Flier, Mich.

Member Gergan Memorial

Approximately the same number die of appendicitis each year as are killed in automobile accidents. We try to teach our children in the schools to be more careful and cautious, to prevent auto accidents, and thousands of deaths from appendicitis can be prevented by early operations. A late operation for appendicitis is really an operation for peritonitis. The early operation removes all the inflamed part, which is then limited to the appendix.

What makes appendicitis so dangerous a disease is that not always are the symptoms in accord with the severity of the disease. A typical attack of appendicitis starts with an attack of pain in the pit of the stomach, which in a few hours shifts to pain or soreness in the lower right side with a hardness or rigidity of the muscles. There is now slight fever and the pulse rate is increased in the number of beats per minute. The patient lies with the legs drawn up or often curled up on the right side. The right side is painful on pressure and the patient instinctively protects himself.

But unfortunately all cases are not so typical in their course. There may be no fever, the pulse may be normal in rate, the pain may be but slight, there may be no hardness of muscles present, and the patient may not appear very sick. These are the cases that may go for two or three days before appendicitis is suspected. Often the patient is supposed to have eaten too much popcorn or peanuts at the picnic.

A good rule to follow is that a sudden pain in the abdomen, if it settles or starts in the lower right side may be an attack of appendicitis, and if appendicitis is suspected, no cathartic or physic should be given. Most cases of ruptured appendix are from persons who have taken a cathartic, as has been strongly pointed out by a great English surgeon, Sir Berkeley Moynihan. Again it should be remembered that relief from pain is not always a good symptom. A ruptured appendix always brings relief for a short time. Soreness in the right side is the danger signal to call your physician for a diagnosis.

It hardly seems possible that a little useless organ the size of an angleworm could be such a dangerous thing when inflamed, but the experience of thousands of patients and the experience of thousands of doctors all agree that it is not the size of things that determines their power for harm.

There is no medical treatment for appendicitis because no one can tell how severe an attack may be or how long it may last, and much valuable time is lost in making experiments with drugs and applications. Early removal means cure and easy convalescence with less loss of time.

WOMAN GOVERNOR'S AID

BOSTON, Mass. (AP)—Mrs. Esther Andrews has been appointed to the governor's council by Governor Fuller. She is the first woman to become a member of this body.

OFFICE CAT

Father—I want to tell you when I was your age, son, I didn't tell any lies.

Son—How old were you when you started, pop?

Nothing, except ultimate salvation is as important as a woman thinks putting down the windows every time it starts to rain.

"I sometimes think I'd like a wife who's dull," said Mr. Nitting. "The keen ones sharp as any knife. Say things that are too cutting."

Love may turn a cottage into a palace. But it can't turn a vacant lot into a steam-heated apartment.

"Hey, Bill, didn't I borrow ten bucks from you yesterday?"

"None."

"How careless of me. Could you give it to me now?"

The trouble with the fellow who is going to the devil is that he wants to take the whole country with him.

A chap in New York lost his voice after being hit in the head with a hammer. A good thing to remember.

One nice thing about buying a home today is that it does not need new piston rings about the time you get it paid for.

She: I hear the Scotchmen are trying to put an end to all the jokes about them.

He: And why?

She: Everyone of them are at a Scotchman's expense.

Permanent waves are fine in hair, but not so good in streets.

She: (visiting very sick brother): "I've had a very nice letter from Emily. She says she's sorry she isn't able to come and see you, but she 'opes to be able to come to the funeral."

"Pa," said little Gertie Grouch, "what is your birthstone?"

"The grindstone," said Grouch, with a look towards his wife.

"Do you know where little boys go who swim on Sunday?" asked the Sunday school teacher of her class.

"Yes'm," replied one little rascal. "On the side of the lake that's got a lota trees, but you can't go—girls ain't allowed."

AT THE THEATERS

McCoy Film Coming Here Saturday

Tim McCoy, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Western film star, has just completed "Spiders of the West," said to be the most perfect American frontier picture ever filmed.

The picture is based on authentic historical data regarding the Laramie treaty with Red Cloud, famous Indian warrior, and was photographed in the state of Wyoming on the very spot which ran red with white and Indian blood in the early seventies.

Not a white man appears in the film as an Indian because McCoy believes that white men cannot faithfully portray the Indian, either in looks or actions. A thousand real Shoshones and Arapahos from the Wind River reservation appear in this picture, which will be shown Saturday only at the Star theater.

"Wild Geese" At Colonial Is Given Praise

The long awaited picturization of the widely read prize novel by Martha Ostenso, "Wild Geese," filmed by Tiffany Productions has at last arrived on the screen and was seen for the first time yesterday at the Colonial theater. Contrary to expectations the film story follows closely this highly interesting and dramatic story of a phase of American farm life, and can be classed as one of the classics of the screen.

Outstanding from a cast of superior players is the remarkable and never-to-be-forgotten portrayal of Amelia Gare by Belle Bennett. As the crushed and hopeless wife of a stern and cruel husband, Miss Bennett reaches heroic heights that class her as one of the foremost screen stars of the day.

"Wild Geese" tells in vivid, broad strokes the story of the dwellers on a Minnesota farm, the head of which, husband and father, is cruel, relentless and crushing, using his children as hired help, while he holds his wife in seclusion, keeping her subjected with the threat to expose to her children and to the world a youthful indiscretion the result being the birth of a son. Things on this drab farm are brought to a sudden and dramatic climax when this son arrives on a neighboring farm and falls in love with a pretty school teacher who boards at the Gare farm. The daughter, Judith, who is high strung, and rebellious is in love with a neighbor's son, and the would-be bride's services as a farm hand, threatens to expose his wife's past if the love affair between the two is not terminated. The wife, wanting her child to be happy, struggles with the husband, but he is adamant. Just as the exposure is about to take place, the husband meets death in a quicksand, and the rest are allowed to give their lives in happiness and contentment.

In addition to Belle Bennett the cast includes Anita Stewart, Russell Simpson, Kiva Southern, Donald Keith, Jason Robards, Wesley Barry, Betta Rae, Evelyn Solbie and a host of others.

New Laugh Maker Opens Run At Arcade

Biscuits, mothers-in-law, and mountain-climbers are all funny, but Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton, in the Alpine comedy drama, "Wife Savers" which opened at the Arcade theater yesterday for a three day run, are funnier than all of them, jointly or severally.

Beery makes the biscuits and eludes the mountains, in the garb of a Swiss yodeler, and the mother-in-law tries to induce him to share a bedside with the bride, he has wrongfully appropriated from Raymond Hatton, who is a second lieutenant in the same unit of the American army in which Beery is not only a buck private but a kitchen policeman as well.

This new Beery-Hatton opus is nonsense of purest ray serene. Its architects had only one thought in mind and that was deep raucous laughter that would convince the diagrammers of the customers, which it does successfully.

At the beginning Beery is Hatton's head waiter in a Brooklyn restaurant. The fortunes of war toss them both up on the Franco-Russian border just as the armistice is signed.

Hatton goes home and assists Waltie behind to look after his girl, Waltie does by marrying her almost immediately, but the marriage is really no doing of his own.

In the end as usual, they both lose the girl to a younger and handsomer rival, but not before they have staged some spectacular chases over the snow-clad Alps, causing a couple of snowslides and landslides and a new set of international complications.

Paramount has given its star comedians an exceptionally capable cast, including such big-time names as Ford Sterling, ZaSu Pitts, Tom Kennedy, Sally Blane, August Toltire and George Harvey.

"Dog of Regiment" Showing at Star Theater

"A Dog of the Regiment," the Warner Bros. production which is showing tonight for the last time at the Star theater, is the first of all the star's thrillers in which he files. He not only rescues his pal, an American Ace, from a burning plane, but escapes with him in one, and being overled shot, again whirls to the sky and safety. Most exciting of all Rin-Tin-Tin's films, and that's saying a lot. Ross Lederman directed.

MOTHERS GO TO SCHOOL

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—More than 1,000 immigrant mothers have enrolled in the classes for foreign-born held by the Pennsylvania Council of Jewish Women.

FAMOUS TOY SHOP CLOSED

PARIS (AP)—The "Children's Paradise," one of the most famous toy shops in the world, has closed its doors forever, making way for a shoe-store. Founded in 1848, during the 80 years of its existence it supplied most of the rulers of Europe. King Alfonso of Spain was one of its best customers, buying all of the playthings for his family there.
