HEALTH

SLEEP

By Charles D. Cheppin, M. D., Miami, Fla.
Member Gorges Memorial

Sleep has been a mystery of the ages, and upon the solution of dreams many a reputation has been made or lost. The exact nature of sleep and its causes are not yet thoroughly understood. The value and necessity of natural sleep for human beings is universally recognized. It was once an adage that the requirements as regards sleep were, six hours for a man, seven for a woman, eight for a child, and nine for a fool. And someone has recently remarked, in referring to the modern youths, that they never want to go to bed the same day they get up. It has never been conclusively settled whether man can constantly work at night, but it is proven that only those animals that are naturally night prowlers can work by night to no disadvantage.

So many factors enter the problem as to the number of hours of sleep that no rule can be laid down which will cover all adults except this one—a sufficient number of hours of undisturbed sleep should be had to restore the energy expended during the previous waking period. If this is not had, the balance will be lost, and sooner or later, health will break down. In the case of children, growth enters the problem as well as expended energy, and this growth ratio must be reckoned with.

Something goes on during sleep which cannot be duplicated by food or rest or any other method

DOUBLE-CROSSING HIM

Identifying that her husband forced her to get out of bed every morning at one o'clock to pray with him, Mrs. Loreta Buckwater won a divorce recently. She used to pray that he'd let her go back to bed, she said.

A farmer's daughter started to practice singing. One day her father came in unexpectedly. "What's that extraordinary noise?" he inquired.

"That, dear," replied his wife, proudly, "is Jane cultivating her voice."

Advice to the young man: When you see a pretty girl it is all right to stop and look. After you marry her you will have plenty of time to listen.

of restoration yet devised. Sleep may be extremely deep with one person and extremely light with another, yet the same number of hours in each may achieve the same results. A dreamless sleep appears to be most beneficial, but a dreamless sleep is not always deep. A fairly good guide in determining the hours of sleep which any person, young or old, should have is to give the person all the sleep he can use. Many children are allowed up until late at night and then have to be called and shaken to get up in the morning—a sure sign that they need more sleep. Up to the eighth year a normal child who is active all day can well use twelve hours of sleep.

From this age on, the hours of sleep may be very gradually reduced.

Adults must work out their own schedules, but be sure to get plenty of sleep. Train yourselves to sleep when and where you will in spite of noises and distractions. Sleep in a well ventilated room. Sleep under light weight covers. Warm enough, but not too warm. Use a moderately small pillow or none at all. Learn to sleep in different positions and always become fully relaxed. Never have on tight night clothing, and never have on a belt so tight that you can notice it.

All this is easier said than done. Perfection in anything is hard to attain, but that is no reason to stop trying. And finally, sleep is the cheapest and most effective restorative known.

Oh well no matter how low their necks are cut or how high their shirts are, we'll still have to take a chance on their real dispositions.

Lady (visiting prison): "And how did you come to be put in here, my good man?"

"I'm unlucky," declared the imprisoned wood alcohol vendor, who was in a confidential mood. "One of my customers didn't go blind and he identified me."

Some horror trouble, some guy it, and others build a house.

Together the doctors examined their patient and then retired to discuss their views, but unfortunately the door did not close properly and their conversation floated audibly to the man in bed.

"You're wrong!" said doctor number one.

"I'm right!" protested doctor number two.

Here the patient groaned loudly and the doctors, realizing the necessity of the case, dropped their argument, but not before doctor number one had made a parting shot.

"Go your own way," said he. "But I'll prove you were wrong at the post mortem!"

AT THE THEATERS

"Chicago" Is Featured At Colonial

For realistic violence every screen film fight has been contrasted to the memorable battle between Tom Santschi and William Farnum in "The Spoilers."

New comes the entry for honors in the hall of screen pugilistic fame among the females of the species. The combatants are Phyllis Haver and Julia Faye and the scene is the women's quarters of the jail in "Chicago," a De Mille Studio production now playing at the Colonial theater.

As Roxie Hart, the beautiful murderess, Miss Haver's notoriety has aroused the contempt of Miss Faye who has the role of a vampire. The encounter is said to surpass in violence the memorable fight between Geraldine Farrar and Jeanne Macpherson in the cigarette factory scene in "Carmen," a C. E. De Mille production made several years ago.

"Chicago" is the film adaptation of the popular stage hit of the same name. A notable cast was chosen for the principal parts. In addition to Miss Haver and Miss Faye the players include Victor Varconi, Robert Edison, T. Roy Barnes, Virginia Bradford, May Robson, Warner Richard, Sid D'Albrook and Clarence Burton.

Remarkable Cast In "7th Heaven" At Arcade

There is something new under the sun and that is the portrayal of the role of Diane by Janet Gaynor in Fox Films version of "7th Heaven" which had its premier at the Arcade theater yesterday afternoon. The flower-like charm of this young actress is something new, appealingly refreshing and spiritually beautiful. Words can not describe the winsomeness of her tear dimmed smile, her happy laugh or the manner in which she shows her spiritual growth from a clinging street wail to a woman fearless in the face of appalling danger and who meets the worst that life threatens to offer unflinchingly.

Charles Farrell, who also rises to stardom with his performance in the role of Chico, that "remarkable fellow" is equally appealing with his stalwart manhood and his careful way of leading Diane from the gutter up the long winding flights of stairs to his heaven in a garret beneath the stars.

Space does not permit an outline of the story, except to say that for sheer simplicity and at the same tremendous interest, it has probably never before been equalled on the screen. The cast, too is not only an unusually fine one, but each member of it seems to have poured his heart into the interpretation of his or her part. It includes Ben Bard, David Butler, Albert Gran, Emilie Chantard, George Stone and many others almost equally well known.

"7th Heaven" was directed by Frank Borzage, from John Goldwyn's stage success by Austin Strong and will be shown at the Arcade theater today and Saturday.

"Blood Will Tell" At The Star Today

Known for the variety of his roles and the vigor of his acting, Buck Jones, the Fox cowboy actor, is showing in one of the best pictures yet set to his credit at the Star theater today for the last time. It is a novel tale of the daring west called "Blood Will Tell," and it goes to prove, as the title indicates, that the finer qualities in man usually come to the surface.

Kathryn Perry plays the principal feminine part, that of a girl from the east who is duped into the belief that she has bought a ranch. Arriving in the west, she encounters a lone rider who "joins up" with her outfit as a cowhand. This is Buck Jones, and in reality he is the owner of the ranch.

Amused by the girl's naive acceptance of her role as a ranch owner, he discovers gradually that she is being victimized by a gang of hard boiled rustlers. That opens the way for Buck to settle affairs, and he does it in his characteristic fashion with the aid of Silver Buck and a pair of convenient six-guns.

In the cast besides Jones and Miss Perry are Lawford Davidson, Bob Kortman, Harry Gripp and Austin Rowell. Ray Flynn directed.

Two short films in the lighter vein are also being shown on the same program.

WHITE HOUSE SCANDAL

WASHINGTON (AP)—White House scandal: Reuben's gone and deserted Rebecca. He escaped from home and took to a high tree. Reuben and Rebecca are pet presidential raccoons.

A life insurance company says $104 is too much for a funeral. Well, maybe for some funerals.

A man made a trip to the Moon to get a bottle of quinine. Then he took a trip in a Carr and went through a gate into some big fields. He lost his hat when he met a big Bull and he picked up a plank and threw it at West. He stepped one foot in a kiddie and stumbled over a Fox and then he ended up at the Pratt Lumber Co. and bought some wallpaper and some 100 per cent pure Monarch paint and ordered some coal. Then he went home and went to bed.

We just gave an opinion today on the old having swimming hole property. The parties think they will take immediate action in developing a swimming hole. Big money back of it.
