Dressmakers In Paris Coin Style Words

By Hazel Reynolds.
(Associated Press Fashion Editor)
PARIS (AP)—Paris dressmakers have a new basketful of fabric names to play with. The jargon of springtime materials is enriched by a string of new words, each with a meaning, even if it is not clear to the uninitiated.

Paul Rodier, French master of the looms, is responsible for many of the new words incorporated into the language of fashion. He discovered and first manufactured kasha, which is the root word of dressmakers' rashaon vocabulary for day-time.

From this root and one or two others Mr. Rodier builds his language of fabrics. To "kasha" he adds various syllables, each with a meaning descriptive of a quality possessed by the cloth in question. The result is a language with words like "mouslikashatulle" and "amperikashabure," both materials to be reckoned with in spring styles, as well as "kashatulle" and "mouslikasha," words that have gone around the world of fashion, one meaning a cashmere wool with a tulle-like weave, the other a very light weight of cashmere wool fabric.

The Rodier materials are of extremely light weight and often of light color as well. A creamy beige shade is the basis of Rodier's spring collection. To that lavender shades, a great deal of coral pink, rich browns, some red and many shades of pastel blue.

Many Rodier fabrics show borders or all-over designs of alternating triangles. Oriental designs, in the printed and woven silks, Small, geometrical patterns predominate but there are a few large flower designs also among the printed silks.

For sport clothes Rodier has created a new material, called "kasha mousmoullé" which looks like woven fronds of ostrich feathers laid close together. "Mille plis" or "a thousand folds," is another new material for sport wear that is having a vogue.

Bridge Pointers

By Milton C. Work
Yesterday the following hand was given:

♠ K-2
♥ 7-6
♦ A-6-4-2
♣ 10-9-7-5

♠ A-3
♥ J-4
♦ K-J-7-5
♣ A-Q-J-9

The question was, at a No Trump contract, how Declarer should plan to play the hand as soon as he saw Dummy's cards.

Declarer can see that he has only six sure tricks in his twenty-six cards to make his game he attempts to finesse in Clubs, Diamonds and Spades. Catching the King of Clubs would give him three more tricks; catching the Queen of Diamonds two more; catching the Queen of Spades, one more. If all three finesses should succeed he would make three Spade tricks, at least one Heart trick, four Diamond tricks and four Club tricks. But unfortunately all his finesses must be taken by one of them should lose, the "danger hand" (West) which has the long Hearts will be placed in the lead.

That being the situation, there would be no point in holding up the Ace of Hearts until the third round. Of course the Ace of Hearts should not be played on the first round as the lead may be from the King-Queen and "closed" Hand may be able to win the first trick with the Jack of Hearts. In that case, should all the cards Declarer is trying to catch be with East, the most improbable contingency he could make a Grand Slam.

His plan therefore should be to play small from Dummy on the first trick. If the Heart Jack should win, he would lead the Seven of Diamonds, putting Dummy in with the Ace of Diamonds and try the Club finesse; intending—if it succeeds—to follow with the Diamond finesse; and if that succeeds, with the Spade finesse. But if East win the first trick by playing either the King or Queen of Hearts and return with Heart, Declarer should win the second Heart trick and try first his Club finesse. If that fails, his game is gone but if it win, he should run out his Clubs which will give him a total of five tricks and leave him with four more assured in Spades and Diamonds. In that case he should not risk his game on a finesse in either of these suits (unless assured by the double woven fronds of ostrich feathers laid close together. "Mille plis" or "a thousand folds," is another new material for sport wear that is having a vogue.) but should take in his three-odd.
