ED BURKE QUILTS RAILROAD WORK AFTER 23 YEARS

has been on the Great Lakes, and he has been in many of the western states and on the Pacific. Moreover, he has seen the west at its most picturesque and lawless age. "I like the salt water and sea air. I'm comfortably fixed, and I'm going to travel," said this settler who traveled from Omaha to California in eleven and one-half days on an early train that traveled 10 miles an hour, and now will travel via limited trains over the nation and via steamboat around the world.

Few men today can tell of the history-making days of early Oregon, California and the north as can Mr. Burke. Few men live today who have seen so much of the picturesque days of the west and enjoy mental and physical health to describe these experiences in an interesting manner. Mr. Burke is such a man.

The wildest days La Grande ever knew, Mr. Burke says, were when the railroad was being built. "A class ofbums followed the railroad and stirred up trouble at every step," he remembers. "Ore Deil" was a busy community in the eighties and it was a pretty wild place. You couldn't show a hair dollar piece in a saloon but what it would be taken from you by the time you got out in the dark again," he recalls.

Unforgettable Trip

A trip that Mr. Burke will never forget was the one he took from Omaha, old across the desert to San Francisco. "We used to get out on top of one of the three passenger cars and pick off the cowboys with revolvers. There were about 10 freight cars and the engine, and no conductor across the desert. Two cowboys were in the car and every person had his own big hipster of non-perishable goods, ham, dry bread, summer sausage, and at Omaha and cooked dinner right there. Our chairs folded into sort of a bed and we carried our own blankets. Some of the travelers had furs, harps and accordions and there were some pretty girls on the train, so we had a fine time," recalls Mr. Burke, humming a bit of the Arkansas Traveler.

Born in Canada

He was born in Canada soon after his family moved to Fond du Lac, Wis., and he came out from there to California where he lived, being

Velva West Goes To Reformatory

Edward West. The 184-mile trip was by automobile.

Baptist Worker Gives Lecture In Local Church

Although only a fair sized audience heard Dr. O. C. Wright, state secretary for the Oregon Baptist convention, last evening when he spoke at the First Baptist church here, he gave a very interesting and inspiring talk on church building in Oregon, which was illustrated with numerous stereoscopic slides.

Dr. Wright told of the progress made in the building of Baptist churches in this state, declaring that more than a million dollars have been spent in Baptist church buildings in Oregon during the past six years. Pictures shown were of the various churches in the state and church workers. He also showed a number of slides of the general Baptist convention held in Chicago, which he attended.

Dr. Wright is making a tour of the eastern part of the state giving illustrated lectures. He left here last night for his home in Portland.
